

Clara Qin

Clara is an ecologist, statistician, and sociologist of science with a broad interest in the macroecology of soil microbiota. Her research combines organismal and environmental datasets to delineate soil fungal species' niches and to evaluate the role of niche mechanisms in driving species distributions. She is also interested in examining the link between traits and dispersal ability.