

Building with Clay Ceramics Returns

About the Class:

Join us for an 8-week program where you will learn a variety of ways that clay can be used to construct both functional and art forms. We will continue the introduction to hand building, but no prior experience, skill or talent is needed, just a desire to get a little dirty and explore the medium of clay. You will work at your own pace with as much or as little guidance as you choose.

About the Instructor:

Janet Schneider is originally from Baltimore and in the 1970's had several brief encounters with clay. After retiring as an occupational therapist and moving to Atlanta, she began teaching at Spruill. She has been there since 2001 and currently teaches hand building and wheel classes. Her style is relaxed and focuses on the individual students' level. She enjoys sharing her fascination with clay and materials, and encouraging her students to take risks in art.
