Defend Public Health New Jersey invites you to a conversation with Dr. Perry Halkitis

Public trust in public health services is at an all time low. Dr. Halkitis, Dean of the Rutgers School of Public Health will lead our discussion about how to repair public health in NJ and in the US. In his new book, "Humanizing Public Health," Dr. Halkitis empowers public health professionals, policymakers, and the public to rethink the way we approach health crises by emphasizing the importance of empathy, community engagement, trust-building, and political acumen as cornerstones of effective prevention and care. Join us to discuss how we can rebuild public health systems that improve trust and reliance on those systems.

Wednesday, December 2, 2026, at noon, ET.

Register Here

Defend Public Health
The national, all-volunteer network working to protect the health of all through proven, science-based policies.

https://www.defendpublichealth.org/