Learning from Experience: KRA Announces 2026–2027 Winter Webinar Series

The workforce development industry continues to evolve, bringing new challenges, and expectations for the professionals who serve our communities. Whether navigating changes in technology, responding to employer needs, or leading teams through uncertainty, one thing remains clear: continued learning is essential to doing our work well.

At KRA Corporation, we believe some of the most valuable professional development comes from learning alongside people who understand the work firsthand. That's the thinking behind our upcoming 2026–2027 Winter Webinar Series, which brings together experienced workforce leaders, industry experts, and practitioners for five trainings focused on the issues shaping our industry.

With decades of experience delivering workforce development programs across the country, KRA understands both the challenges and opportunities facing workforce organizations. Our goal is to create space for relevant learning experiences where industry leaders can share what they've learned, discuss approaches that have worked, and offer practical insights that others can apply in their own organizations.

This year's series features five timely sessions:

- December 1 | Every Outcome Has a Story: Turning program results into meaningful stories that communicate impact and inspire action.
- December 15 | The Fiscal Hot Seat: Navigating audits, budget pressures, and compliance challenges with greater confidence.
- January 12 | Innovation for All: Exploring how technology can improve workforce services without losing the human connection.
- January 26 | The Business of Workforce: Strengthening organizational performance, leadership, and resilience during times of change.

- February 9 | I AM READY: Rethinking how we engage and prepare Generation Z and Generation Alpha for future opportunities.

Each session will bring together different perspectives, real-world experiences, and practical strategies that participants can take back to their teams and organizations.

For KRA, this series reflects a broader commitment to supporting the growth of workforce professionals and strengthening the industry we serve. We recognize that the challenges facing our workforce system cannot be addressed in isolation. By sharing knowledge, learning from one another, and bringing new ideas into our daily work, we can continue improving how we serve job seekers, employers, and communities.

Registration is now open. Individual sessions are $125, or participants can register for all five sessions for $500, saving $125.
