For Provider Use With CalOptima Members

What is CalFresh?

CalFresh, formerly known as Food Stamps and federally known as the Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP), can help stretch your food budget so you can buy healthy food for you and your family. Monthly amounts are based on eligibility, such as household size, income and expenses. The program provides benefits on a debit-type card (also known as an Electronic Benefit Transfer, or EBT card) that can be used at grocery stores, farmers' markets and online at stores such as Albertsons, Vons, Amazon, Walmart and Sam's Club.

Why should I consider enrolling in CalFresh?

CalFresh can help you and your family increase your access to healthy food, which is important to your overall health and wellness. Eating the right foods can help you prevent illness and live a healthier life. Showing children good eating habits early can help them thrive and even perform better in school.

What are the steps for enrolling in CalFresh?

First, a CalFresh Eligibility Worker will collect information about your household size, income and expenses. Second, they will call back to interview you to confirm that information. Third, you will get a notice in the mail. The whole process can take up to 30 days but being patient and following through can help you obtain benefits that will help you and your family for months to come.

Am I required to be a citizen to receive CalFresh benefits?

Talk to a CalFresh Eligibility Worker. Some qualified non-citizens may be eligible. Even if you are not eligible for CalFresh benefits, other members of your family may be. Parents who do not qualify should apply for their children born in the United States. Enrollment in CalFresh does not impact immigration status.
