

New VA ID card coming in November

All honorableably discharged veterans of every era are now able to get a photo identification card from the United States Department of Veterans Affairs (USDVA) starting in November, due to a law passed in 2015. The law, known as the Veterans Identification Card Act 2015, directs the USDVA to issue a hard-copy, photo ID to any honorableably discharged veteran who applies. The card must contain the veteran's name, photo and a non-Social Security identification number. Veterans who want one of the new cards must first register online with Vets.gov, a website that authenticates users through ID.me, a third-party verification system. A timeline for how long it will take to receive a card after application has not yet been established. There is presently no fee associated with issuance of the ID cards. Congress passed the ID law as a way to help veterans prove their service, without showing a copy of their DD-214. Those who receive health care from the VA or have a disability rating can get a photo ID VA health card, also known as a Veteran Health Identification Card. Military retirees also hold an ID card issued by the Defense Department. (Adapted from military.com)
