BEA 16-07

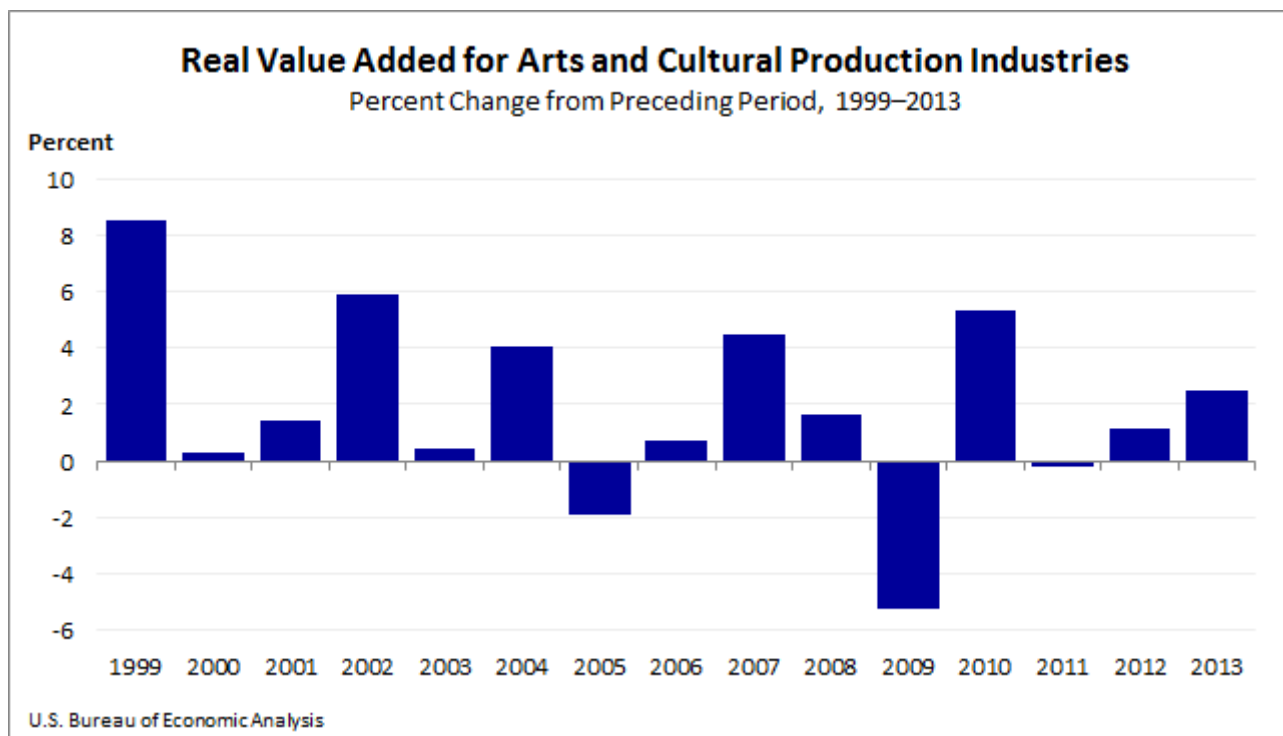

ARTS AND CULTURE GROWS AT FASTER PACE IN 2013

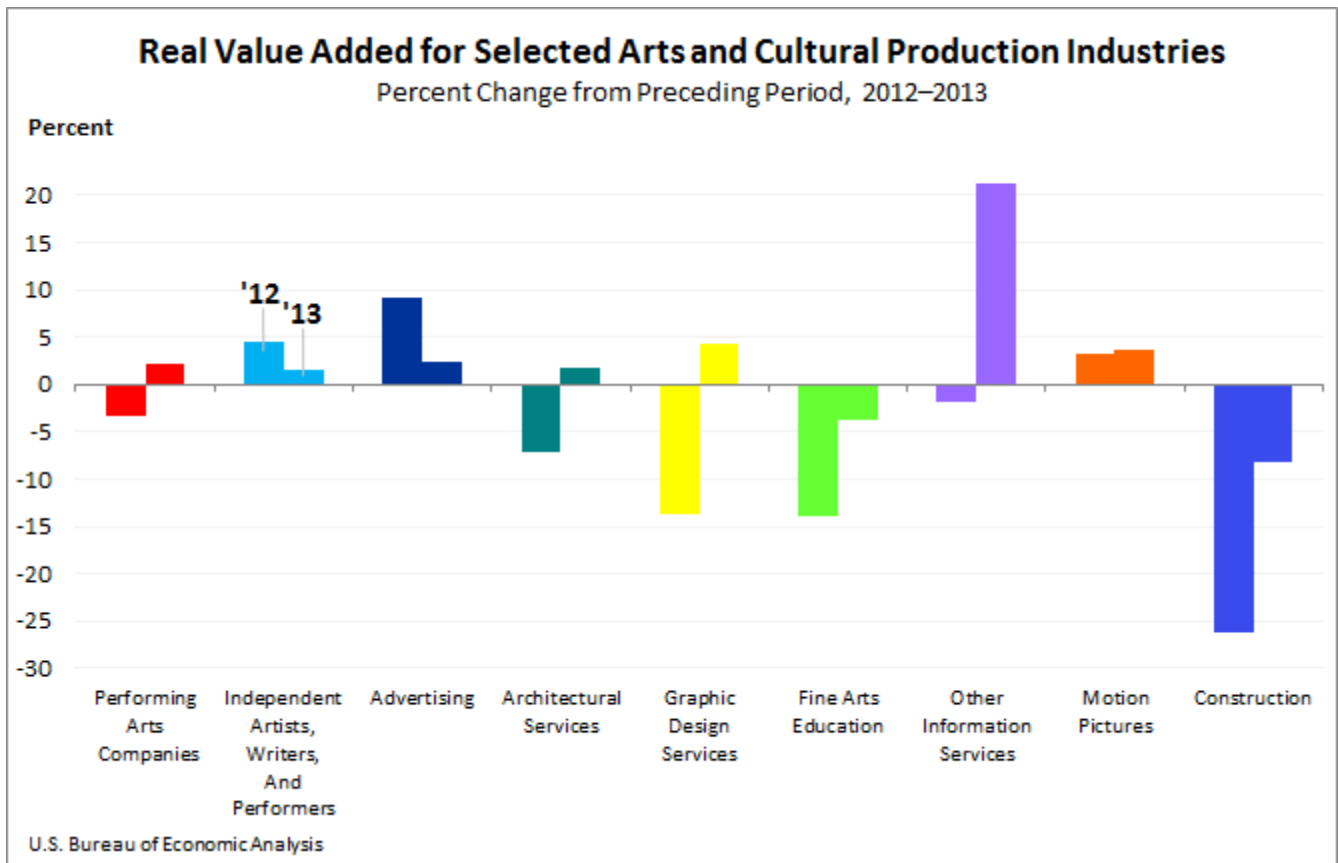

BEA RELEASES FOR THE FIRST TIME INFLATION-ADJUSTED STATISTICS

Arts and cultural economic activity – adjusted for inflation – grew 2.5 percent in 2013, according to estimates of the industries’ real value added by the Bureau of Economic Analysis (BEA). That compares with a 1.1 percent increase in 2012.

Information services and design services were the leading contributors to the growth in 2013. Overall, 26 of 36 – arts and culture related industries – contributed to the increase. This is the first time that BEA has released inflation-adjusted statistics that track the changing economic impact of arts and culture.

Core arts and cultural industries, such as performing arts, museums and design services, grew 3.3 percent. Real value added for supporting industries, including art support services and information services, increased 2.5 percent.

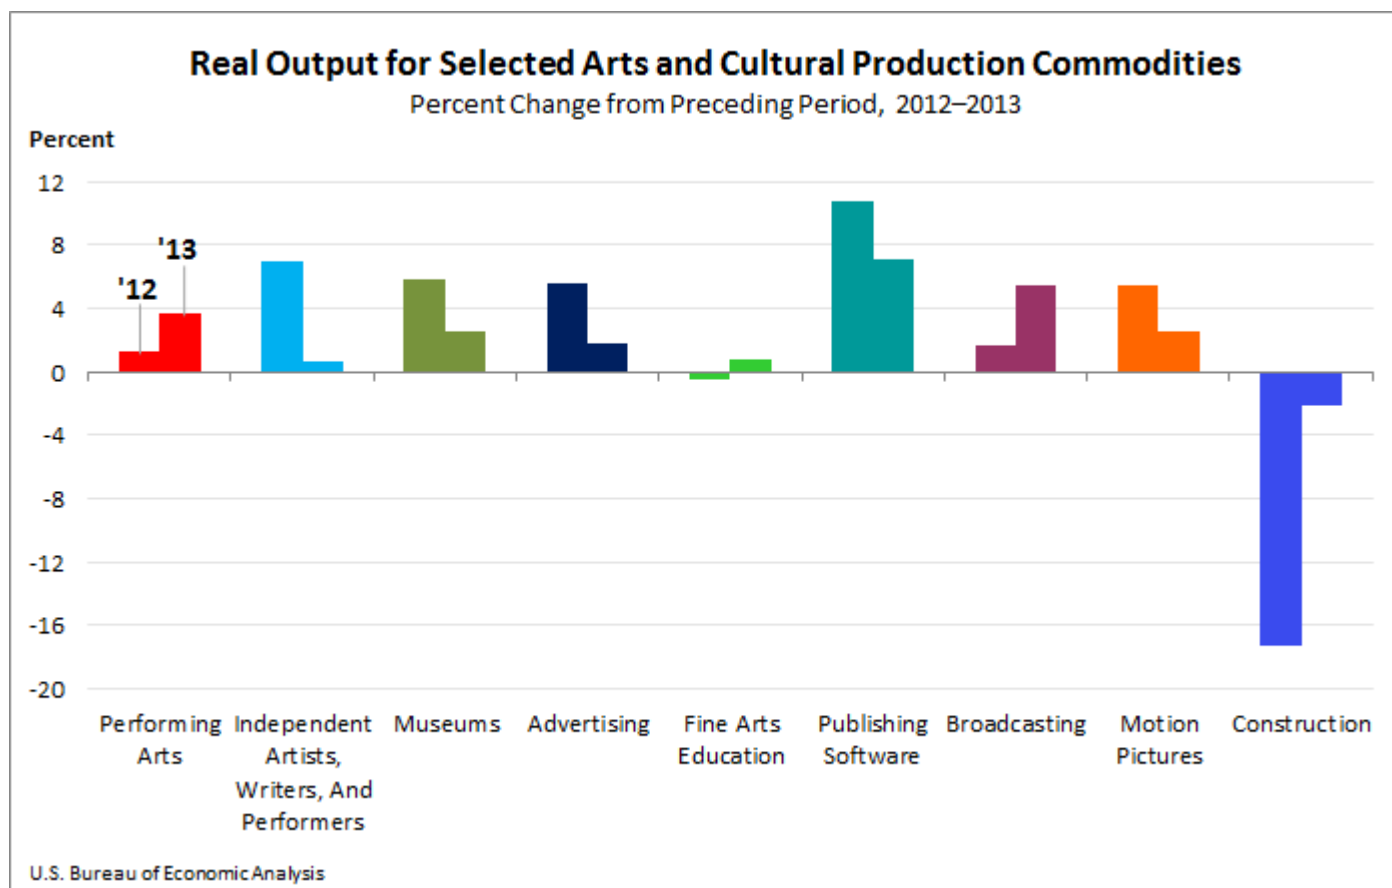

Other highlights

- Other information services, which includes Internet publishing, Internet broadcasting and Web search portals, was the leading contributor to the growth in real value added in 2013. Other information services increased 21.2 percent, after decreasing 2.0 percent in 2012.
- Construction activity related to arts and culture fell 8.1 percent, following a decline of 26.2 percent.
- Both graphic design and architectural services rebounded, increasing 4.3 percent and 1.7 percent respectively, after decreasing 13.8 percent and 7.1 percent.
- Performing arts companies also rebounded, increasing 2.2 percent, after decreasing 3.3 percent.

Gross output

In addition to real value added statistics, BEA's Arts and Cultural Production Satellite Account also includes a measure of real gross output. Under that measure, total inflation-adjusted spending on all arts and cultural commodities reached $1.1 trillion in 2013. That figure was up 2.7 percent from the year before.

Gross output serves as a proxy for total sales and is not adjusted to exclude expenses incurred in the production process. For example, gross output for the opera reflects all ticket receipts without subtracting the expenses incurred in the production of the opera such as advertising, rent and costume rentals.

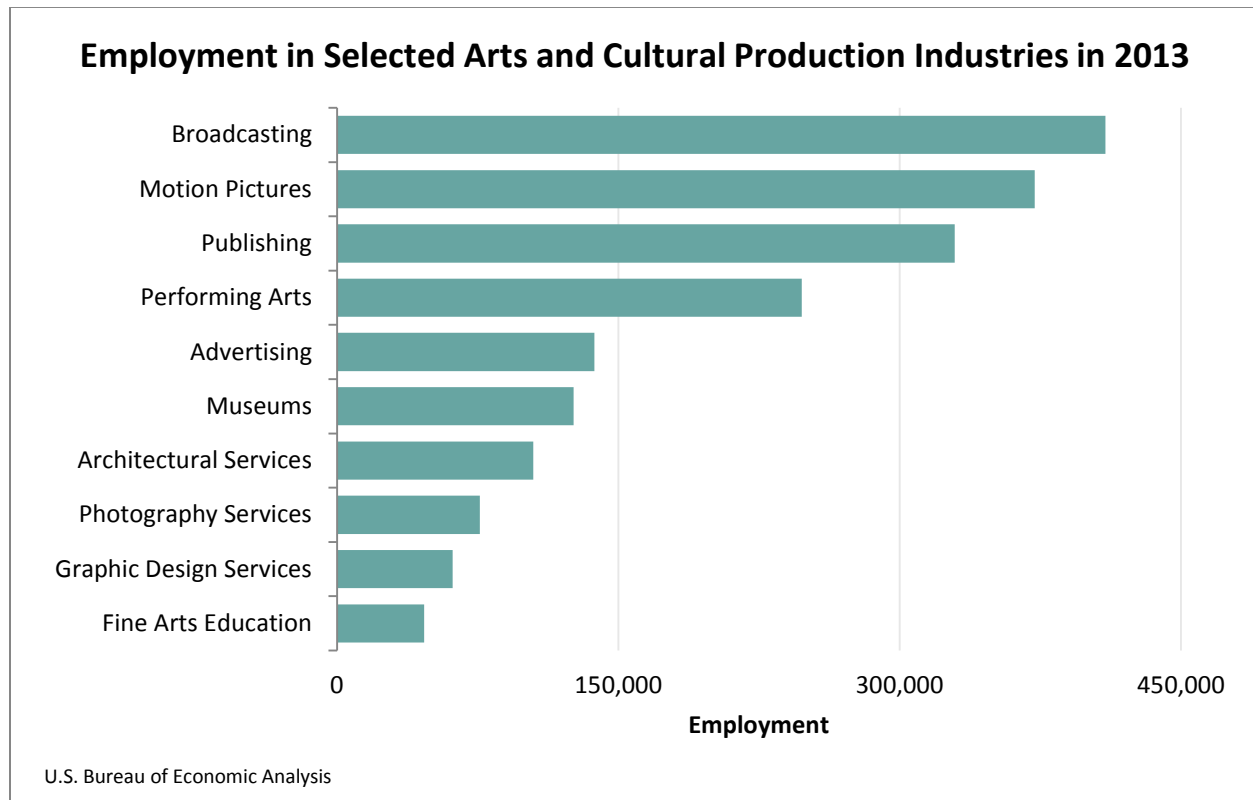

Other highlights

- Real gross output growth slowed slightly in 2013. It rose 2.7 percent, after increasing 2.8 percent in 2012. Advertising services was the leading contributor to that deceleration, increasing 1.7 percent, after growing 5.6 percent.
- The category of independent artists, writers and performers was the second-leading contributor to the deceleration in real gross output in 2013. That category increased 0.6 percent, after a 6.9 percent rise.
- Performing arts output grew at a faster pace in 2013, increasing 3.7 percent, up from 1.2 percent. This faster growth was widespread, including gains in music, opera and theater.

Employment

Employment for all arts and cultural industries totaled 4.74 million in 2013. Art support services, including rental and leasing, totaled 1.19 million jobs, the most in all arts and cultural industries. Information services, including publishing, motion pictures and broadcasting, accounted for 1.17 million jobs and retailers related to arts and culture totaled 731,200 jobs. Employment for design services was 471,100 – about half of which is accounted for by advertising and architectural services.

Definitions

ACPSA output. ACPSA output consists of all domestically produced goods and services purchased (for example, movie tickets or design services).

ACPSA employment. ACPSA employment consists of all jobs where the workers are engaged in the production of ACPSA output (for example, dancers or architects).

ACPSA value added. ACPSA value added consists of ACPSA output minus ACPSA intermediate consumption (for example, costumes rented by a performing arts company or printing of the program for the show).

BEA's Arts and Cultural Production Satellite Account (ACPSA) is supported by funding from the National Endowment for the Arts (NEA).

This release of the ACPSA incorporates estimates from the annual revision of BEA's Industry Economic Accounts.¹ Before this year, BEA released arts and cultural production statistics in current dollars only (i.e. without inflation adjustment).²

Defining 'Culture' in the context of Input-Output Tables for the Arts and Cultural Production Satellite Account

Culture can be defined in a variety of ways to include: language, traditions, beliefs and values. For this account, arts and cultural production is defined narrowly to include creative artistic activity; the goods and services produced by it; the goods and services produced in the support of it; and the construction of buildings in which it is taking place.

The Input-Output table is a valuable tool to identify and estimate the value of the 'creative chain.' This chain captures the economic value of the creation of a cultural product (composing a symphony) from its production (the performance being recorded in a studio), distribution (by various modes), and final consumption (by the listener).³
