Katherine Griswold Bio

I feel as if I can walk into your pictures.

This is the phrase most often heard to describe Katherine Griswold's photographs. Her sharp eye for color and light entice the observer to step into the crisp scenes captured by her lens.

In addition to her portrait and event photography, Katherine enjoys shooting natural subjects: animals, trees and landscapes. She can intuitively capture scenes with a candor that gives the gift of presence and draws the viewer into the work, almost making the canvas disappear.

Winning the Connecticut Natural Resources contest in 2008 was the beginning of her professional photographic journey. She has since enjoyed success in many solo and group exhibitions around northwestern Connecticut, which she calls home.

Her photos have appeared on the cover of Connecticut Magazine in 2011, and she feels honored to have been published in several books. These include Seasons in Connecticut and A Christmas Book, both by Diane Smith published by Globe Pequot Press in 2010. A project she is especially proud of, called Norfolk Through A Lens Visions of a Quintessential New England Town by Anita Holmes, was published in 2016 by Art Book Printing and received recognition by the Independent Publishers Book Awards.

When Katherine isn't photographing, she makes a living as a professional singer and also teaches voice to students of all ages from her private studio in Norfolk.
