Kearney Agricultural Research & Extension Center, Parlier

Nitrogen in Table Grapes: Assimilation, Distribution, Fertilizer Recovery Efficiency, and Monitoring"

Matthew Fidelibus joined the Department of Viticulture and Enology, UC Davis, in 2002 after completing his PhD in Horticultural Sciences from the University of Florida. He conducts mission-oriented research to reduce production cost, and improve yields and quality, of grapes for raisin, table, and wine. His research interests include environmental physiology, nutrition, plant growth regulation, and cultivar and clone selection. He is a past president of the Plant Growth Regulation Society of America (PGRSA), and an associate editor of the American Journal of Enology and Viticulture, and California Agriculture. He served as an Associate Editor of the Journal of Plant Growth Regulation for 8 years. He has been awarded the Extension Distinction Award by the American Society for Enology and Viticulture, and the Young Scientist Award by the PGRSA.
