FEATURING LAUREN BARRETT

Winemaking Specialist, Enartis

"Wine Microbiology: Leveraging and Modulating Microbial Ecology to Drive Wine Quality Factors"

Lauren Barrett grew up in Sonoma County where she cultivated a curiosity for the culinary arts and fermentation. This passion led her to enroll in the Enology program at California State University Fresno State, where she received her Bachelor of Science in Enology. She continued her studies in the Vinifera EuroMasters program, earning her Master of Science in Enology and Viticulture from Montpellier SupAgro INRA and Instituto Superior de Agronomia Universidade de Lisboa. Her thesis work was with the Australian Wine Research Institute bioscience team, focusing on Metschnikowia pulcherrima and Oenococcus oeni microbial interactions.

Lauren joined Enartis in 2019 where she works hand in hand with winemakers, bridging the science of wine with practical applications of Enartis range of enological products. There she contributes as a consultant, organizer and author for numerous commercial trials and educational outreach (webinars, seminars, conferences).
