FEATURING JUSTINE VANDEN HEUVEL

Professor of Viticulture - Director of Undergraduate Studies
Cornell University

"Using Under-Vine Vegetation to Replace Herbicide Use in Vineyards"

Justine Vanden Heuvel is a Professor of Viticulture in the School of Integrative Plant Science at Cornell University. Originally from Canada, Justine completed her PhD at the University of Guelph and was on faculty at University of Massachusetts before joining Cornell.

Her research focuses on how environmental and viticultural factors impact wine style and quality, soil health, vine growth, and fruit composition. She is the Director of Undergraduate Studies for Viticulture & Enology, and teaches two upper-level courses for the program: The Science of Grapevines and Advanced Viticulture.
