

There is a saying “No winter lasts forever; no spring skips its turn” by Hal Borland. Can you feel the change in not only the weather but perhaps the re-bounding of business? Like the days getting a little warmer and longer each day, business seems to slowly be rebounding. It truly feels like we possibly are all awakening from a long metaphorical winter as we emerge from the past couple years of the pandemic.

Growing up in Pennsylvania I learned that even though spring was on its way we really had no idea how long winter really was going to last. Like some winters, the pandemic just has lingered on and on. For me this has been the hardest part, not know when thing will return to some semblance of normal. Hopefully we can all emerge from our long winter slumber like the grizzly bears and get back to whatever the new normal will be. We hope you enjoy this spring - future looking edition of the Newport News! Brighter days are ahead!
