Berlin!

In the heart of Europe lies Berlin, the colorful and lively capital of Germany. With 3.7 million inhabitants, it is the largest city in the region. Berlin has often been the scene of world history – industrialization, revolution, National Socialism, German division and reunification. The traces of history can still be discovered in countless places in the city. But time has not stood still: today Berlin is a center of creativity, a city of contradictions and tensions, a place where people of different languages, religions and nationalities live together.
