

The Affordable Care Act provides a tax credit (called an "advance premium tax credit") to help certain individuals afford health coverage purchased through a marketplace. Advance payments of the tax credit can be used to lower your monthly premium costs.