PROFESSIONAL EXPERIENCE

Alison Gadoua is a Tax Controversy Specialist for E. Martin Davidoff, Attorney at Law who works remotely from Maryland.

Alison has over 20 years of experience in resolving IRS and State Tax controversy issues and assisting clients in maintaining business and individual tax compliance. Utilizing her strong written, oral and managerial skills, Alison works directly on a large inventory of the firm's most complex, high-dollar cases achieving much success in Offers in Compromise and Examinations, as well as positive outcomes with the Office of IRS Appeals in collection matters. She is also responsible for the coordination and organization of tax return materials for some of our major clients during tax season.

Alison joined the firm in July of 2000 after graduating from Katharine Gibbs Business School. In addition to managing a large caseload of Tax Controversy clients, Alison has also been responsible for the development and maintenance of the firm's Tax Controversy Manual, which contains all the systems and processes used in the Tax Controversy Department.

In her spare time, Alison enjoys traveling, reading, cooking, boating and cheering on her children at their respective sporting events. Alison resides in Snow Hill, Maryland where she dedicated six years to serving the community as an elected official for the town—serving as the Councilwoman of the Eastern District.
