

November 2017

Friday, November 10, 8:30pm and Saturday, November 11 12:00pm

Green Shabbat Weekend

Join us and Hazon Detroit for an environmentally themed Shabbat weekend! After our Friday night services at 7:00pm, please join us for an environmentally sustainable kosher vegetarian meal at 8:15pm. We are excited to host the CEO of Hazon, Nigel Savage, along with a group of community and IADS Green Team members who are working in different fields tied to the environment about how they integrate their Judaism into their work. We will have a panel discussion and then break into smaller groups. On Saturday morning, Shabbat services will begin promptly at 9:00am. At noon, we will discuss environmental themes from the Torah, led by Nigel Savage, over a delicious environmentally sustainable kosher, vegetarian meal.

Monday, November 13 12:00—1:00pm

Lunch & Learn with Rabbi Silverman

In the beginning...God instructed us to protect God's creation. Today, 5778 years later, as we are wrestling with how to do so, we will look back at the earliest Jewish texts on environmental sustainability and discuss how we can incorporate them into our lives. Kosher, vegetarian lunch provided.

Tuesday, November 14 7:00—8:30pm

2017: A Year in Review

It's been one year since the election. Join us for an introspective and intimate conversation with award-winning Detroit Free Press journalists, Stephen Henderson and Nancy Kaffer. We will discuss policy issues (what has changed and not), the increased visibility of hate groups, and the state of local, state, and national politics. Wine and cheese will be served.

Thursday, November 30 7:00—8:30pm

The Price of Protest: The Commercialization of Color and the NFL

Join us in examining the contemporary issues surrounding the NFL protest using constitutional, corporate, and critical race frameworks. Shanthi Elizabeth Senthe is an Assistant Professor at Windsor Law. She taught Business Associations, Secured Transactions, Corporate Governance, and Remedies. Shanthi is admitted to practice law in Ontario, Florida, North Carolina and the District of Columbia. Her research interests include corporate, commercial, banking and finance law, critical race theory and more recently sports law. She is also currently leading a research study involving Black commercialization and financialization in the Detroit area. Refreshments will be served.
