

SPRING 2020 TEACHER WORKSHOP SERIES

Teaching Civil Rights: A Workshop for Educators

Dr. Hasan Jeffries

March 6, 2020 (evening), 5:30 - 7:30pm

Join us on Friday, March, 6 for a book signing reception and discussion. Dr. Hasan Jeffries, Associate Professor of History at The Ohio State University, will discuss his new edited volume, Understanding and Teaching the Civil Rights Movement.

The book will be available for purchase from the Museum Store.

March 7, 2020, 9am - 2pm

On Saturday, March 7, Dr. Hasan Jeffries will host a workshop featuring several of the nation's leading civil rights scholars who will lead sessions based on their chapters in Jeffries' new book. These sessions will introduce teachers to new scholarship and resources, and will provide them with innovative ways to teach the movement.

Scholars include:

Julie Armstrong, University of South Florida: "Teaching the Civil Rights Movement Through Literature"

Todd Moya, University of North Texas: "Using Oral History to Construct and Teach New Civil Rights Narratives"

Charles Hughes, Rhodes College: "Teaching Music of the Movement"

Participants who complete both workshops will receive a copy of Dr. Hassan Jeffries' newly released book, Understanding and Teaching the Civil Rights Movement.

Make Room in the Circle: Black, Indigenous, and Immigrants' Rights Youth Movements in Alliance, 2000-Present

Dr. Wesley Hogan

Director of the Center for Documentary Studies at Duke University, author of Many Minds, One Heart: SNCC's Dream for a New America (2007).

March 28, 2020, 9am - 12pm

Since 2000, veterans of the 1960's freedom movements have worked to share their informational wealth with youth leading Black, Indigenous, and Immigrants' Rights movements throughout the country. In this workshop, we will explore resources for teaching K-12 students about the connections between the 1960's freedom movements and civic activism today among young people.

These resources include SNCC Digital Gateway, film, role plays, and using oral history techniques in the classroom.

Participants who complete the workshop will receive a copy of Dr. Hogan's book, On the Freedom Side: How Five Decades of Youth Activists Have Remixed American History.

REGISTER NOW: Education@CivilRightsMuseum.org

These workshops are eligible for hours toward professional development for the 2019-2020 academic year!