

The Orpheum Memphis presents its newest Saturday Series show: Lessons of Humanity: What My Grandfather Taught Me. The show is part of our Saturday Series shows which is geared towards families and this one is a collection of stories from a former Ugandan refugee infused with music, humor, and hope. It is recommended for ages 9+. Plus there are pre and post show activities for the whole family. It takes place at 10am on Saturday, Jan. 18. SCS students can use the link and discount code below to get tickets to the show for $10 (theatre fees are already included in this price!)

Unique link: <https://oss.ticketmaster.com/aps/orpheum/EN/link/promotion/home/d31eb7cfcc8015c876a28b665044df63de267ca3>

Code: HUMANITY

More about the show: Samite has remarkable stories based upon his work with refugees and survivors of war. A former refugee from Uganda, Samite has worked with groups as diverse as child soldiers in East Africa to cancer survivors in the American Midwest. He has discovered a universal healing power in music. His tales are inherently dramatic, but they are filled with humor and insight inspired by his grandfather's wisdom and the people he meets. Interspersed with his stories are powerful vocals accompanied by African instruments. He's a gifted storyteller – you will never forget his message of humanity.