Topic: Informed Consent – Other Practitioners or Students Performing Tasks Related to Surgery, or Examinations or Invasive Procedures

What are the informed consent requirements when other practitioners or health profession students will be performing important tasks related to surgery, or intimate/sensitive examinations or invasive procedures for educational or training purposes?

Any examples are for illustrative purposes only.

Scenario 1: Important tasks related to surgery, or intimate/sensitive examinations or invasive procedures involving sedation or anesthesia may be performed by another physician, an advanced practice provider, medical student, or other health profession student for educational or training purposes. The hospital's policy includes the following:

- The informed consent discussion includes informing a patient when important tasks related to surgery, or an intimate/sensitive examination or invasive procedure that INVOLVE sedation or anesthesia may be performed by another physician, an advanced practice provider, medical student, or other health profession student for educational or training purposes.
- A signed consent form is obtained that includes this information.

Scenario 2: Important tasks related to surgery, or an intimate/sensitive examination or invasive procedure that DOES NOT involve sedation or anesthesia may be performed by another physician, an advanced practice provider, medical student, or other health profession student for educational or training purposes. The hospital's policy includes the following:

- The informed consent discussion includes informing the patient when important tasks related to surgery, or an intimate/sensitive examination or invasive procedure that does NOT involve sedation or anesthesia may be performed by another physician, an advanced practice provider, medical student, or other health profession student for educational or training purposes.

- A note must be entered into the medical record that the informed consent discussion included informing the patient that another physician, an advanced practice provider, medical student, or other health profession student may perform tasks related to surgery, or an intimate/sensitive examination, or an invasive procedure for educational or training purposes. A signed informed consent form may be used in lieu of a note but is not required, unless required by HCO policy.

In both scenarios, documentation of consent is required.
