

Scouting Report for the Women's NCAA Basketball Tournament

By Ralph Watkins

Final Four in Tampa -- April 5, 2019

4:00 p.m. Oregon vs. Baylor, ESPN2

6:30 p.m. UConn vs. Notre Dame, ESPN2

Baylor University

Seventh-ranked Oregon (33-4) will be the underdog when it steps on the court at 4 pm Friday to face top-ranked Baylor (35-1) in the first of two Final Four contests. The game will match Oregon's superior discipline against Baylor's dominating defense. Oregon leads the NCAA in terms of fewest turnovers and fewest fouls committed (see chart at the end of this report), while Baylor tops the NCAA in field goal percentage defense, rebounding margin, and blocked shot per game. The Ducks and Bears rank fairly close in most other metrics.

In addition to the defensive categories noted above, Baylor ranks in the top five nationally in several offensive categories: scoring margin (2), field goal percentage (4), 3-point field goal percentage (4), assists per game (1), and assist-to-turnover ratio (2). The Bears have a tall, balanced, and experienced team that dominates the paint, makes few mistakes, and can shoot the ball accurately from distance when necessary.

The twin towers of 6-7 senior Kalani Brown and 6-4 junior Lauren Cox make for an imposing back line on both offense and defense. The pair combines for 28 points, 16 rebounds, 5 assists, and 4 blocks per game. Each was named to both the All-Big 12 First Team and Big 12 All-Defensive Team this season, with Cox also honored as the Big 12 Defensive Player of the Year. Brown likes to work close to the basket where she sports a 61% FG accuracy, while Cox likes to step out for the option of a mid-range jumper or driving to the hole. She connects on 51% of her shots. Cox has an excellent handle, dishing out 2.6 assists for each turnover committed.

Baylor sports a pair of quick 5-8 combo guards in LSU graduate transfer Chloe Jackson and hometown junior Juicy Landrum. Each was honored as All-Big 12 Second Team members this season. The duo combines for 23 points, 9 rebounds, 9 assists, and 3 steals per game. Jackson uses her speed to get to the basket (48% FG accuracy) or dish to a big, while Landrum is the Bears' most effective outside shooter, connecting on 40% of her shots from beyond the arc. Landrum has made over half of Baylor's total 3-point baskets this season. Expect her to receive plenty of attention from Oregon's matchup zone. Duck guards may have double duty defending the 3 ball and dropping back in the paint to annoy Brown.

While Landrum shows off her shooting skills on the wing, 6-1 sophomore off guard Di Di Richards uses her height to lob passes to Brown and Cox or to overpower opposing guards while driving to the hole. She has not attempted a 3-point shot this season. She is more likely to pass the ball than to shoot it, but when she does release her shot, she makes good on over half of her attempts. Richards is second on the team in assists (4 apg), with an excellent assist-to-turnover ratio of 2.45 to one. Richards is also a shut-down defender and was named to the Big 12 All-Defensive Team this season. Satou Sabally and Erin Boley will likely share responsibility for disrupting Richards' offensive efficiency and testing her defensive skills.

Three bench players provide effective relief for Baylor's starters, averaging between 10 and 15 minutes per game. 6-2 junior NaLynssa Smith and 6-3 freshman Queen Egbo play close to the basket, combining for 14 points and 9 rebounds per game, with Smith shooting at a 53% clip. 5-6 sophomore Moon Ursin is instant offense off the bench, making 42% of her attempts from distance, while also adept at applying ball pressure on defense.

University of Connecticut

Second-ranked Connecticut (35-2) will seek to halt third-ranked Notre-Dame (33-3), the defending NCAA National Champion, in Friday's second national semifinal game. Both teams are ranked in the NCAA top four for scoring and scoring margin (see chart at the end of this report). Notre Dame is a better rebounding team, while UConn has better defensive stats. Like Oregon, both teams rely on their starters for the bulk of their scoring, with little help off the bench. Both teams have five starters averaging in double-figure scoring, with UConn's starters accounting for 93% of the team's total points per game, compared with 91% for Notre Dame. (Oregon's starters account for 88% of the Ducks' total points.)

UConn's leading scorers are 6-2 senior center Napheesa Collier (21 points, 11 rebounds, and 1.5 steals per game) and 6-3 senior wing Katie Lou Samuelson (19 points, 7 rebounds, and 4 assists per game). Collier is usually quicker and more athletic than opposing post players. She also has a good mid-range jumper. Her speed allows her to score on the fast break as well. She makes good on 62% from the field and is a good ball handler, with a 2:1 assist to turnover ratio. Samuelson leads the team in made 3-pointers and connects on 38% of her shots from beyond the arc. Her height and smooth delivery make her shots difficult to defend. Samuelson is second on the team in assists, with a 2.5:1 assist to turnover ratio.

Crystal Dangerfield, a 5-5 junior, is the floor general. She can use her quickness to drive through the paint for a layup or dish to a taller teammate, or pull up for a jumper. She averages 14 points and 6 assist per contest. She leads the team in steals (1.6 spg) and is an excellent ball handler (3:1 assist to turnover ratio). She is not shy about taking shots from distance, tying Samuelson for the team lead in three-pointers attempted, but making four fewer (36% accuracy). 5-11 freshman Christyn Williams (12 points per game) helps bring the ball up the court. She too shoots 36% from 3-point range.

Similar to Samuelson, 6-1 sophomore forward Megan Walker (12 points and 7 rebounds per game) likes to step outside for her shots, making room for Collier to create in the paint. Walker is UConn's most accurate 3-point shooter at 40%.

Three players average between 10 and 14 minutes per game off the bench. Olivia Nelson-Ododa, a 6-4 freshman, is the team's best shot blocker, totaling nearly as many blocks as Collier but in 40% of her playing time. Nelson-Ododa contributes 4 points and 4 rebounds per game. 5-9 sophomore Mikayla Coombs enters the game to run the offense and apply pressure defense. When a quick scoring punch is needed, the Coach Auriemma can turn to 5-9 junior Molly Brent or 6-2 junior Kyla Irwin. They shoot 55% and 39%, respectively, from 3-point range.

Honors:

Napheesa Collier was named the AAC Player of the Year and Defensive Player of the Year this season. Collier previously shared AAC Player of the Year honor with teammate Katie Lou Samuelson in 2017. ## Notre Dame University

Notre Dame lost only one starter to graduation after its NCAA Championship in 2018. 6-2 Kathryn Westbeld was replaced in the starting lineup by 6-3 graduate student Brianna Turner who sat out last season following a devastating knee injury. Prior to her injury, Turner was named to several All-America teams in 2016 and 2017. She is still working to regain past form. Her game is in the paint with her back to the basket. From the interior, she is averaging 14 points and 8 rebounds per game, while connecting on 64% of her field goal attempts. She is a powerful defender, blocking 100 shots this season and also coming away with 42 steals.

Turner's presence in the interior allows 6-4 senior Jessica Shepard to pop outside for midrange jumpers or work the baseline where her girth and footwork can create high percentage shots. Shepard is averaging 16 points and 10 rebounds per game while shooting 61% from the field. 6-0 junior Jackie Young is the third member of the lunch pail crew. She can use her quickness to slash to the basket, pop up for a mid-range jumper, or crash the boards. She averages 15 points on 55% shooting and grabs 7 rebounds per game. Young has a knack for getting the ball to her taller teammates, earning her a team-leading 5 assists per game.

With their teammates controlling the boards, guards Arike Ogunbowale (5-8 senior) and Marina Mabrey (5-11 senior) are free to fire away from long range, confident that their pals will corral any missed shots. On defense, they can release for fast break receptions when Turner, Shepard, and Young come away with rebounds. Ogunbowale is connecting on 35% from three-point range, while Mabrey leads the team in made 3s (72) and 3-point percentage (41%). Ogunbowale also uses her quickness to break free for mid-range jumpers and come up with steals for fast break opportunities that up her overall FG accuracy to 45%. Ogunbowale leads the team in scoring (22 ppg) and steals (2spg), while also contributing in rebounding (5 rpg) and assists (4 apg). Mabrey has developed a solid all-around game, averaging 13 points and 5 assists.

Four players average between 10 and 15 minutes off the bench. Sophomores Mikayla Vaughn (6-3) and Danielle Patterson (6-2) provide relief for Turner and Shepard in the middle. Freshmen Abby Prohaska (5-10) and Jordan Nixon (5-8) sub in at guard. These four subs combine for 11 points and 7 rebounds per game. On the season, they account for 89 (12%) of the team's assists, but 125 (25%) of the Irish turnovers. The youngsters will need to take better care of the ball if they want more playing time.
