Welcome

It is my honor to serve as IDEC's President during the year of our first virtual Annual Conference. Does anyone remember that thrilling moment in Tulsa when it was announced that our conference would be in Vancouver? It seems like the distant past, now. But instead of Vancouver, we have this wonderful virtual conference that has broken open the envelope of time to let us meet together and explore the 2021 conference theme: Dialogue: Diversity + Design.

There is a robust Inclusion, Diversity and Equity dialogue happening now within our education and design communities. IDEC is part of that dialogue.

I would like you to think of this conference as part of the process, part of the dialogue. The conference taskforce of dean Denise Rush (BAC), assistant dean Jana Macalik (OCAD), Dr. Angelita Scott, (IWBI), and Dr. Lisa Tucker (Virginia Tech) identified incredible keynote speakers each representing some facet of interior design practice and industry, our conference will culminate in a hands-on IDE workshop on Friday, March 5th. During the workshop, we will collaboratively apply our evolving knowledge and insight to specific interior design curricula.

Incredibly, this year, there are 80 + Scholarship Intensives, often followed by an "IDEC Chat," an open dialogue on the presentations. IDEC also launched a research study on Diversity, Inclusion, and Equity in interior design programs, conducted by Dr. Angelita Scott of IWBI and Dr. Lisa Tucker of Virginia Tech. The results of this survey will be presented by the authors on March 1.

It has been a privilege to serve IDEC this past year. Never have such tremendous challenges faced our profession and society. And through it all, IDEC members came together as a community---to support one another, to institute change, and to embrace the new 'normal' of our profession and our world.

Facilitator; Angela Reamer, HKS CADRE, Ford
Think Tank Anthropologist; Casey Lindberg, HKS
CADRE, Ford Think Tank Behavioral Psychologist;
Dr. Richard Smith, Pediatric Neurologist*

The future of work is top of mind for every organization. How we emerge in a post-pandemic society remains an unknown. However, establishing a framework by which we thoughtfully construct a new working paradigm requires meta-design thinking with input from (hard and soft) scientists, academics, and designers.

The Future of Work Think Tank assembled at Ford Motor Company examined the nature of work in an ever-changing future through the lens of “Brain to Building” - evidence-based affordances to the individual, the group and the collective culture. Insights are currently being applied to the new, 2million SF Ford campus headquarters in Dearborn, Michigan.

The session will reflect on the structure of the Think Tank and the perspective of subject matter experts representing the “Brain to Building” framework as a vetting mechanism for design

CV Review

Ensure you stand out by participating in an informative and interactive event that will help you prepare your CV for the academic job market. You will have the unique opportunity to receive mentorship advice from IDEC Fellows and other seasoned IDEC members. The event begins with a roundtable with advice for all attendees and then ends with breakout CV review sessions for registered participants. You must RSVP for this event.

Detailed Schedule

March 5 9:00 am - 3:00 pm CT

Inclusion, Diversity, & Equity Workshop

This day-long workshop will continue the conference dialogue, by focusing on Inclusion, Diversity and Equity in academia, and in curricula and coursework. Building on the knowledge and skills gained in Sessions 1 and 2 on Unconscious Bias, the final session of the day will bring participants together to collaboratively revise, rework, and adjust interior design course artifacts - like syllabi or project announcements, within the context of the prior presentations and discussions. This active learning session invites all participants to engage in a safe, brave critique of teaching materials to raise our collective awareness about how to evolve an inclusive, diverse and equitable interior design education.

The IDE Workshop is generously supported by the IDEC Fellows, and was proposed and developed by IDEC's IDE Network, co-chaired by Taneshia West-Albert and Roberto Ventura.

Session 1: Uncovering Our Unconscious Bias

Facilitator, Kate Thornton, Director of Global Education at Auburn University, offers an introduction of cultural intelligence (CQ) unconscious bias. Cultural intelligence, or CQ, is the foundation and strategic link to inclusion, diversity, and equity (IDE). This session will address managing bias with cultural intelligence, seeing unconscious bias, expanding your perspective of cultural values & unconscious bias, improving decision-making for strategies to disrupt Decision-Making Bias, disrupting biased systems and practices and creating your own action plan.

Session 2: Addressing Unconscious Bias in Coursework

Workshop leader Mayuko Nakamura offers a presentation and interactive workshop on making syllabi and teaching materials more inclusive. Workshop participants will analyze examples to uncover unconscious bias, and are encouraged to bring their syllabi/teaching materials to actively rework them to improve inclusivity.

Session 3: Integrating Inclusion, Diversity, & Equity into Interior Design Coursework

Coordinated by the IDEC Inclusion, Diversity, and Equity (IDE) Network Co-chairs, Taneshia West-Albert and Roberto Ventura. Participants will use the knowledge and skills gained in Sessions 1 & 2 to collaboratively rework, revise, and adjust 2-3 interior design course artifacts to integrate Inclusion, Diversity, & Equity. Sample course work to be collected through a pre-conference call for projects/coursework from any Interior Design topic/course, to be used anonymously for the workshop.
