

Accelerated Special Issue on COVID-19

- Expedited Refereeing
- Immediate online publication following acceptance

Canadian Public Policy/Analyse de politiques, since 1975 the foremost peer-reviewed journal examining social and economic policy in Canada, invites submissions related to the COVID-19 pandemic for expedited publication. The target is high-quality and timely articles evaluating the current situation in Canada and the policy response as well as proposals for immediate policy revision and development. A range of submissions is welcomed, from longer articles up to 7000 words which cover a broad issue to much shorter articles on a very specific topic. It is anticipated that contributors may come from such disciplines as health services/policy, economics, political science, sociology, social work, demography, epidemiology, business and management studies, geography, and legal policy.

Instructions to authors and a submissions link are at: <https://www.economics.ca/cpages/cpp-authors> .

Peer review will be conducted within two weeks. Standards will be high and feedback will be more limited than usual: in some cases only one review will be provided. Only articles requiring minor revisions will be accepted. Content will be published online immediately and then collected in special monthly issues beginning as early as July. Printed copies may not be available for some time.

This initiative will begin immediately for all COVID-19 submissions and will continue until June 15, 2020.

The journal thanks a number of guest editors who have volunteered their services for this effort.
