

Volunteer role description

Democrats for Life of America (DFLA) is at a critical point in its journey: this year alone, we have lost our most outspoken defender in Congress, Dan Lipinski, and our party's nominee is threatening to impose taxpayer-funded abortion on a country that doesn't want it. We are fighting back. This year, we plan to hire a second employee to support our Executive Director Kristen Day, launch a new candidate recruitment initiative, support several endorsed candidates with a National Day of Action, fight the Democratic Party on its platform, and start a youth initiative.

We are looking for a Communications Director to join our Candidate Committee. This will be a challenging role, requiring several hours of volunteer work each month. We are looking for someone with an unwavering commitment to the Pro-Life for the Whole Life cause. The Communications Director responsibilities are the following:

- Publish endorsements and elected official ratings on social media, in press releases, and on our website
- Publicize National Days of Action for endorsed candidates, including requests for volunteers and funds, via social media and our newsletter
- Support other Candidate Committee initiatives, including working closely with our Recruitment Director, National Action Director, board, and Executive Director

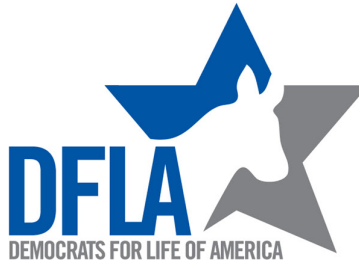

You will work with a small but brilliant team of passionate activists to supercharge DFLA. You will steer an organization at a crucial time of growth, spearhead an upswell in the Democratic Party, and help protect society's most vulnerable, from pre-born children to those on death row. You will engage with prominent elected pro-life Democrats.

No prior charitable, political, or activist experience is required. We are primarily interested in organized, independent self-starters who are good at follow-through.
