

· How the skills I learned in the program benefit my daily professional activities: I had valuable hands-on experience shepherding a new medical product through aspects of the regulatory affairs process through the different assignments and projects. I received direct industry regulatory submission experience and the essence of working in a regulatory team through the projects. I could identify my interest in the wide regulatory domain and developed my analytical and critical-thinking skills which I utilize in my current role, daily.

· Ease of enrollment or transitioning to graduate school at Plymouth: The process of enrollment at St. Cloud State University, Plymouth was very systematic and smooth at St. Cloud State University, Plymouth. From the very beginning, I was guided by my program director Cathy Krier and other admissions office members. The Center for International Studies and the School of graduate studies made my admission to the graduate school organized.

· Professional Association or Student Group involvement/other networking including ongoing relationships with colleagues and faculty to keep learning and growing in the profession?

I am involved with the Engineering Alliance of Minnesota as a Student member where I volunteer to encourage the students residing in Minnesota to pursue Regulatory Affairs as their career and enlighten them on how I am contributing as regulatory affairs professional during the pandemic. I am also associated with RAPS (Regulatory Affairs Professional Society) where I network with the regulatory professionals make invaluable connections and working towards building a connection with the regulatory community.

· Anything about the facility, Plymouth location (twin cities), or people you interact with or across programs at Plymouth: The facility and the people with whom I have interacted within or across programs at Plymouth have embraced me with open arms in their heart. It never gave me a chance to feel lonely. I worked as a Facility Assistant in the Plymouth campus for about 1 year and got an opportunity to interact with a high variety of students of different countries and it indulged in me a sense of inclusiveness and I will cherish the memory of my college experience at SCSU forever.
