

Project Regeneration & Church Sustainability

Tools and Strategies for Aligning and Reconnecting to Our Call Today

9:00am – 11:00am

Saturday, March 5, 2020

A zoom conversation you will not want to miss!

Please join churches from across our Presbytery for a morning of discussion, learning, and equipping, as we explore next steps for our ministries and church properties in this dynamic and changing time. Join Maggie Harmon, ministry relations officer for our region as we explore some of the challenges facing congregations as they navigate membership change, new worshipping experiences, and property management concerns. Shocked by a pandemic, called to respond to the pain of others, forced out of doing things “the way we always have,” we have a unique opportunity to pause and consider where our call from God is leading.

Project Regeneration is a consultative service designed to companion churches through a discernment process to build agreement and clarity about goals for the future of the ministry. This is a faith-based methodological approach that includes prayer and study, trend analysis, and active group workshopping. We will discuss the nuances of what a Project Regeneration engagement might look like for your church, the kind of outcomes you might expect, and the realistic options for a church that finds itself at an inflection point.

Like any living body, the church moves through cycles of life, and different seasons of activity. Our time together will consider what this means for your congregation, how a Project Regeneration engagement might benefit you in your future planning, and how to be intentional in responding to the needs of our communities to create a strong foundation for future ministry.

There is no cost to attend this informative gathering or for the processes and resources provided by the Presbyterian Foundation, should this be an avenue your congregation wishes to explore further.
