

2024-25 Creative Work and Social Impact Scholarship Funding Program (CWSIS) Call for Proposals

PROGRAM OVERVIEW

The CWSIS program is a strategically focused investment strategy that enhances faculty capacity and University prestige. The program supports scholarship in areas of creative work and social impact that have strong potential to enhance program and university rankings and bring greater visibility and recognition to our faculty and institution. In addition to raising the visibility and influence of Auburn University, CWSIS projects may attract external funding in the form of grants, industry partnerships and contracts, private foundation funding, and donor support. Investing in CWSIS supports the university's strategic plan by elevating scholarly impact, investing in outstanding people who advance the university's mission, and providing an exceptional student experience. The program will provide opportunities for faculty to apply for funding in the following disciplines:

Design and the Arts: Architecture, landscape architecture, interior architecture, interior design, industrial design, environmental design, apparel design, consumer and design sciences, graphic arts, visual arts, studio arts, performing arts (music, dance, theater, etc.), creative writing, and other relevant fields.

Humanities: English, foreign languages, literature, linguistics, philosophy, history, history of art and architecture, archaeology, ethics, and other relevant fields.

Social Impact Scholarship: Applicable scholarship within business, education, social sciences, health and well-being, and relevant activity in other fields such as quantitative and qualitative research, policy research, urban and community planning, design for health, best practices/evaluation research, outreach scholarship, and other social impact scholarship.

Interdisciplinary Research: Proposals that connect the Creative Work/Social Impact disciplines with STEM disciplines may fit with either the CWSIS or the Research Support Program (RSP) program areas. Teams developing these types of submissions should determine whether the proposal fits more with CWSIS or with the RSP and submit to the best-fitting program area. Interdisciplinary research proposals submitted to the CWSIS may have funding/resource needs outside of typical CWSIS proposals. Collaborative teams should consult with the ADRs associated with their colleges for input and guidance.

* With this background it is important to note that The OSVPRED will fund external reviews for up to five (5) proposals from each constituent college that participates in the intramural funding programs (i.e., across CWSIS and RSP combined). In addition, the OSVPRED may fund up to ten (10) proposals from both the CWSIS Program and the RSP Program in toto, not per program.

Project Budget Information: Proposers may request between $2,000 and $25,000 from the OSVPRED with a 1:1 mandatory matching contribution between the OSVPRED and the College(s)/Department(s). For example, if $25,000 is requested from the OSVPRED, a $25,000 match is required for a proposed total project cost of $50,000.

A PI cannot submit an additional proposal while leading an ongoing CWSIS or RSP project (e.g., if a PI is leading a two-year CWSIS or RSP grant, the PI cannot apply for another CWSIS or RSP grant in the second year of the existing grant, even if all other requirements are met).

PI is eligible to apply for a CWSIS grant during the upcoming funding cycle if:

Past Awardees should be prepared to submit a detailed description of the ROI activities related to the funded project
