

Planning is Essential

Luanne Lee, Your College Planning Coach, believes, “The Warrenton MEC is turning into a true business hub and connection point for those of us who use the facility. The business connections I have made because of being located in the Warrenton MEC have been essential to the growth of my business.”

Lee is extremely busy right now as one of MEC-Fauquier’s clients. But it is the wrong time of year for planning if you are a high school senior. “I am so busy with parents who want results now, but the time to begin planning for college should really start as early as when a student is in middle school,” she explains.

And Lee is the person who would know. She is an expert in college financial planning and funding. Not only does she help families minimize the cost of higher education, she assists them in finding ways to minimize debt and not jeopardize retirement plans.

As a college planning coach, Lee helps students focus on the right fit for their needs: academically, socially, and financially. She said, “Getting into college these days is both competitive and expensive.” And the expansion of her business as one of MEC-Fauquier’s busiest clients shows that planning is essential.
