CONTRIBUTING TO A BETTER SOCIETY AND BEING ON THE RIGHT SIDE OF HISTORY

This editorial is a summary of my remarks – a cameo appearance via Google Hangouts (Google was the primary sponsor of this launch). Thank you for being here – I see your presence, your interest in learning more about the GDIB -- as a sign that you are standing up for the values of equity, diversity and inclusion.

Why are we offering the GDIB? Why are we so confident that “we’ve learned what works?” Why have we put so much energy into engaging 95 expert panelists into consensus decision making? Getting 95 experts to agree is not an easy task – trust me on that. Why have we labored over every word? Why do we update the benchmarks every 4 or 5 years?

Because we believe that if we can improve the quality of D&I work, it will not only help improve individual and organizational performance, but it will result in a more just – a better -- society.

Recent events –

- The many concerns about gender inequity in the tech – and other – industries.
- Athletes – and others – bending on one knee – to protest injustice
- Talking past each other in misguided attempts to reduce tensions
- Ethnic cleansing at the root of many terrorist attacks
- Racism, islamophobia, homophobia, sexism
- Shunning or standing still on increasing disability services
- Uncertainty about what we can and what we can’t talk about at work. Uncertainty about free speech... about hate speech. About a hostile work environment.
- Election interference – confusion and denial.
- And then there are hopeful responses, such as: The number of leaders – politicians and organizational – who are taking a stand to support justice and equity. The groups such as B-Corp members that sign up for “business as a force for good”
- It’s a long list ... and it’s a global list – there are more examples

I realize that many of you – probably most – have been touched organizationally and personally by these events.

The GDIB is designed to help all of us recognize and agree on what quality work in D&I is. It is more than training and education. It is more than programs. It is more than groups and celebrations. It is about achieving outcomes – we call them benchmarks. GDIB is free because many, many people are willing to put in the effort and the funding to help it be free.

As Price Cobbs, a GDIB Expert Panelist, and first recipient of the GDIB Vanguard Award said... “Rest assured... we are on the right side of history.” Julie O’Mara

ACTIONS TO HELP ACHIEVE THESE GLOBAL D&I BENCHMARKS

☑ 13.2 (GDIB CATEGORY 13: MARKETING AND CUSTOMER SERVICES, LEVEL 5 BEST PRACTICE): The organization is keenly aware of the needs, motivations, and perspectives of diverse customer and stakeholder groups and successfully adapts to meet these needs.

UC Berkeley: Connecting Students with Disabilities and Employers

Students with disabilities face unique challenges around job search and employment. In the US, for example, the nationwide unemployment rate for persons with disabilities with college degrees is 6.8% compared to 2.5% for non-disabled persons. There are many ways to help level the playing field for graduates with disabilities who are seeking employment. How best to help students with disabilities find and fill job opportunities that they are suited for and in which they will not be discriminated against for their disability. There are many employers today who are proactively seeking to hire graduates with disabilities. Thus, UC Berkeley needed a new Career Services model to provide an enhanced opportunity to connect students with disabilities with employers. UC Berkeley (UCB) has proposed a new model for providing career services to students with disabilities. It will hire a career services specialist who is also a disability specialist who will work in the Career Center and will report both to Career Services and the DSP Director. This new specialist will serve the broader Disabled Students' Program (DSP) population. Students who have been confirmed as a person with a disability by the Disabled Students' Program include students with both apparent and non-apparent disabilities, ranging from autism spectrum to learning disabilities to vision and hearing impairments to mental health disabilities to wheelchair users. This model of career services for DSP will allow the specialist to utilize all of the resources of the Career Center in working with DSP students. This specialist will also provide training to the rest of the career services staff on how to provide better service to persons with disabilities. Furthermore, hiring this position will send a message to our students with disabilities that we are committed to providing excellent services, beyond just compliance with the law, for all students with disabilities. The above information is provided by GDIB Expert Panelist Sidalia Reel, Ed.D., Staff Director, and Karen E. Nielson, JD/MSW, Director, Disabled Students' Programs, UC Berkeley, Division of Equity and Inclusion. For more information contact Karen at: knielson@berkeley.edu <<mailto:knielson@berkeley.edu>>

☑ 13.2 (GDIB CATEGORY 13: MARKETING AND CUSTOMER SERVICES, LEVEL 5 BEST PRACTICE): The organization is keenly aware of the needs, motivations, and perspectives of diverse customer and stakeholder groups and successfully adapts to meet these needs.

GDIB HAS THE BENCHMARKS FOR THESE EGREGIOUS MISSTEPS!!!!

"The reporter asked: Why do these organizations keep missing the mark about diversity and inclusion in their advertising? How can they get it so wrong?" As I was writing this newsletter and watching TV simultaneously, I heard yet another story about an advertiser making a significant diversity and inclusion misstep on advertising. This time it was Dove, a Unilever Company in a Facebook ad which they took down quickly after many accusations of racism. A month or so ago it was Pepsi. And there have been others. Who is vetting these ads? How could these obviously inappropriate ads get approved? The person being interviewed answers by saying that people of color need to review the ad prior to it running. Yes – although I would clarify that a group of people with diversity and inclusion expertise should screen the ads before they run – and these groups should have the authority to stop the ad. Below are several benchmarks that address this issue. Perhaps we should send them the GDIB!!!! Julie O'Mara.

☑ 13.5 (GDIB CATEGORY 13: MARKETING AND CUSTOMER SERVICES, LEVEL 4 PROGRESSIVE): While outside expertise may also be sought, the organization leverages the marketing, distribution, and customer service expertise of its diverse staff.

☑ 13.7 (GDIB CATEGORY 13: MARKETING AND CUSTOMER SERVICES, LEVEL 4 PROGRESSIVE): The marketing and sales force has intercultural competence and can adapt and work effectively with customers of many backgrounds.

☑ 13.9 (GDIB CATEGORY 13: MARKETING AND CUSTOMER SERVICES, LEVEL 4 PROGRESSIVE): Agencies and consulting services with expertise in diversity regularly provide advice.

SEATTLE GDIB LAUNCH – CONTINUED “HOT”!

September 27 was a “hot” night in Seattle—both in temperature and attendance as close to 200 people flowed into Google, the Platinum and Venue Host for the Seattle GDIB Launch event.

outreach

The Launch planning team dubbed the event a “huge success” on many levels: “The GDIB, the highlight of the event, was well received—people are hungry for tools and want more,” Effenus Henderson, noted. Terry Loving was excited to “see the energy around the networking.” Effenus and Terry are both members of the planning team.

“People didn’t know each other and were surprised and pleased to meet others interested in D&I,” discovered Randall Lane, Expert Panelist. “No matter what level of career, stage or status of the organizations, and or depth of knowledge – the GDIB provided a overview that allowed everyone to audit their practices for the better,” offered Steven Matly. “I loved the question about intersectionality,” said Barbara Deane, Expert Panelist, “the person wanted to know how the GDIB is handling this issue!” Steven and Barbara are both planning team members and Randall, a presenter at the event.

More than 100 organizations were represented at the event.

Additional Sponsors: Outreach (GOLD Sponsor), Zillow Group (Silver Sponsor), BECU (Bronze Sponsor), and SM Diversity, Institute for Sustainable Diversity & Inclusion, The Diversity Collegium, and the Forum on Workplace Inclusion.

Attendee reactions

One participant described the GDIB Launch as a “Spa day for my soul!” Another shared that “practitioners need to be held” further noting how important it is for people doing this work to come together—to talk, commune, share their feelings and their struggles.

Another participant remarked, “True belonging is when you don’t have to ask if you belong. [This is] what I look for, what sparks me to continue down this path.”

The Planning Team believed the event’s success was also due to its collaborative approach and the diversity of participants and organizations involved; the combination of Funding Sponsors, Promotional Sponsors, GDIB Expert Panelists, Sector Panelists and Breakout Session Captains created an eclectic forum where participants could share stories, have meaningful discussions, even disagree.

“There is no substitute for sharing experiences with one another. The stories I heard at the Seattle GDIB Launch Event reminded me how common it is to misinterpret conformity to processes and behavior norms as evidence of a healthy culture. I now have greater appreciation for how often the conformity only masks pain and inequity in our organizations. Tools like the GDIB and professionals trained in its use are vital to understanding the true health status of our organizations.”

Steve Burgon, Attorney

Ogden Murphy Wallace, P.L.L.C.

“ We have used the GDIB when revising our action plan for diversity and inclusion. This tool's simplicity and practicality allowed us to raise awareness of both management and unionized employees with regard to the best practices as well as to explore new courses of action. The ensuing exchange of information allowed us to target new measures that will enable the City to advance in its goals. ”

From the website: "As Canada celebrates its 150th birthday, it is as important to build for an inclusive and prosperous future as it is to celebrate the past. Our places of work are a microcosm of society. Now more than ever, it is important for champions to step forward and lead the inclusion movement in our organizations. This premier forum is unparalleled in Canada, where executive champions and diversity professionals can learn from diverse perspectives, share great practices and network with D&I thought leaders from across the continent. Beyond the business case, this conference is designed for inclusion champions, executive sponsors, leaders of employee resource groups and talent management professionals who understand the inclusion imperative but want to expand their knowledge of the dimensions and intersections of diversity and unconscious bias so they can help lead the journey in their organization."
