SEEKING A SPECIAL FOREVER OR FOSTER HOME AND DOGGIE SIBLING

I'm a very cute 7-month old golden puppy who was born missing part of my brain. In a lot of ways, I'm a typical golden: I snuggle with my foster mom, sleep in my crate all night like a good boy and jump out in the morning to go potty outside and then am looking for my breakfast, like to explore the backyard, run through the house and around the backyard with the zoomies, and love wrestling and snuggling with my foster brother Remy who is a big dog and has shown me the ropes around his house.

Here's my dream list of a forever or foster home:

- Patient adult(s) only, with someone around most of the time
- A relatively quiet single story home without a pool, since I can't see
- A sibling dog who can show me around

Bonuses you're probably not expecting with a special needs puppy:

- I won't destroy your favorite shoes/slippers or dog toys
- I don't need lots of exercise
- I'm very good at napping for a while in my crate
- I will help tire out your other dog, because... wrestlemania!

My "shortcomings":

- I can't control my mouth fully, so sometimes I bite hard when I am stressed or afraid; I also have a soft mouth at times and give kisses when I'm calm.
- I don't have complete control of my elimination functions (big words for a little guy). I am working on this and a home where the humans have a less busy schedule and only 1 dog might be better for me.

My foster mom and I have been together for 3 months, so she knows me pretty well. Not to state the obvious, but she thinks I'm awesome and that there's a great home out there for me. Can you please help us find it?
