

BALTIMORE Artist EMERGENCY RELIEF FUND

Making it as a creative has never been easy and many of us depend on freelance work to make ends meet. But what happens when disaster strikes and we can no longer sustain our livelihoods by doing what we do best?

The impact of the COVID-19 crisis on our creative community has been devastating - we've watched gig after gig - and paycheck after paycheck - get canceled in a matter of days for reasons beyond our control. Many of us have been left wondering - how will I care for myself and my family without income? Sound familiar? You're not alone.

While we can't predict how long our current crisis will last, we can come together to support each other in our time of need. Thanks to a coalition of passionate partners old and new, and inspired by the generosity of artist-led relief efforts in Baltimore and across the country, we have pooled together our resources to offer emergency grants of $500 to Baltimore City creatives who are experiencing financial strife as a result of the COVID-19 crisis. While we know the grants are small and the needs are great, we hope they will offer you the leg up you need to tackle another day and get back to creating.

About the Baltimore Artist Emergency Relief Fund: The Baltimore Artist Emergency Relief Fund is a coalition-led initiative designed to provide direct assistance to Baltimore-based artists and creative entrepreneurs who have lost income due to the COVID-19 crisis. This fund was created through a partnership between 20 artists and arts organizers committed to working together for the collective good of the Baltimore creative community, and is made possible by administrative and funding support from T. Rowe Price Foundation, The Baltimore Office of Promotion & The Arts, Maryland State Arts Council, Robert W. Deutsch Foundation, The Grit Fund, and Baltimore Creatives Acceleration Network.

We get it. Talking about money can be uncomfortable. Especially when it comes to feelings of shame when we don't have it. We have designed the application process with this in mind. We commit to keeping all applicant information confidential to staff and the review committee. We will not share your personal information with anyone without your explicit permission. Because we're all committed to creating longer-term safety nets and supports for Baltimore creatives - we will ask some general questions that we will report out on in aggregate (for example: "60% of applicants said they needed additional support with filing taxes" or "30% of our applicants are in the film industry").

What are eligible expenses for the grant funds? What can I spend the money on?

Funds can be used to cover expenses related to: Your personal well being (food, shelter, medical expenses); your creative practice, as it relates to generating income for yourself (supplies, materials, insurance, studio costs, business expenses, collaborator fees, etc). to recover losses for expenses incurred for canceled gigs (eg. travel, venue deposits, etc). How much grant funding is available? The grant award is $500.00 per grantee. Because funds are limited, grants are limited to one per person.
