It could be me next.’ And I think it's an important part of the story for someone to say, ‘Look what's happened to Robert, because if it could happen to Robert, it could happen to anybody.’” - William Baldwin

Just by sitting and spending a little time talking and mostly listening, you could see how much people everywhere just need to be heard and felt and cared about.” - Xander Berkeley

Beverly D’Angelo
She plays wife “Ellen” in all the National Lampoon’s vacation movies with Chevy Chase. She also starred in Violent Night with John Leguizamo that came out this past December. She’s known for numerous films including Coal Miner’s Daughter with Sissy Spacek, the Griswald vacation movies with Chevy Chase, Pacific Heights with Melanie Griffith, Michael Keaton and numerous more.

"In preparing for the role by speaking directly to the people on our streets, in encampments, and in the shelter system, I came to believe very strongly that the core issue among the homeless is that of mental health. Whether this is organic or situationally induced, it is the single consistent commonality in all the people I spoke to and was spoken to about. So, I fought hard to deepen the character description of 'a Hollywood actress who fell on hard times when she couldn't remember her lines' to a more fully embodied character who is the victim of untreated mental illness. The role I play as 'Dora' represents that truth." - Beverly D'Angelo

Ashanti
Grammy Award-winning, multi-platinum singer, songwriter, and actress, author and producer, Ashanti has her own star on the Hollywood Walk of Fame. You also know her from Resident Evil with Milla Jovovich, Coach Carter with Samuel Jackson and Stuck with Giancarlo Esposito.

“I was truly moved. I love that the script was able to portray so many different sides of the spectrum of this heartbreaking, massive problem we have. I immediately wanted to be a part of this important work. The characters and the real-life work the producers and team are doing, will make this a monumental and impactful film. I love being able to give back, bring awareness and help our communities however I can.” - Ashanti

“Something that really struck me about the screenplay for No Address was the genuine attempt at capturing a glimpse into the lives of people who call the street their home. I want stories like this to be told, because I myself want to be an audience member. I have witnessed the effects of homelessness in my community before and during the pandemic. Equal opportunity and affordable housing are issues I take very seriously.” -Lucas Jade Zumann handle this topic, and it's especially important to me because I grew up surrounded by homelessness." -Isabella Ferreira

It's making a tremendous difference." -Patricia Velasquez

Kristanna Loken
