

Sean Jauss
Partner, Solicitor | Mewburn Ellis

Sean has over 15 years of experience advising on contentious and non-contentious IP matters, including patents, trademarks, designs, copyright, database rights and trade secrets across a range of industry sectors. A highly recommended lawyer, Sean works closely with senior management and their external counsel to deliver a wide range of IP related projects in a pragmatic and commercially-focussed manner, including on IP protection, commercialisation, technology transfer, and dispute resolution.

Sean has BSc in Microbiology from Imperial College London and a PhD in the same subject from Cambridge University. After law school, and qualifying as a solicitor (in 2003) at a 'magic circle' firm, Sean established the technology transfer office at the London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine. He re-entering private practice at well-known international technology firm, specializing in IP in 2007. He joined Mewburn Ellis LLP in 2011 and the partnership in 2014.