

The Oregon Horse Council is excited to host a 2-day course in Technical Large Animal Emergency Rescue (TLAER) multiple times in 2019. The TLAER is taught by world-renowned expert, Dr. Rebecca (Gimenez) Husted.

This training will show you the proper ways to respond and prepare for large animal emergencies. This could range from a cow or horse stuck in a hole, trapped in a river/muddy area, a trailer wreck on a freeway with trapped animals, or simply everyday farm/ranch emergency situations.

The TLAER training courses bring together people from all disciplines and introduce the latest concepts, techniques, procedures and equipment being used today – to learn to work together on a scene and build a great incident action plan, then extricate the animal safely for both the animal and responders. The instructor communicates and networks with people all around the world to develop innovative tactics, techniques and procedures to share with their students.

TLAER, Inc's ongoing research and development focuses on simple and practical applications with student-suggested improvements. Courses are updated constantly, allowing students to learn about the most current methods and equipment in each course. The instructor is a horse and cattle person, so she knows about the behavior of animals and people and how that applies on-scene. Learn more about the course at www.tlaer.org.

We hope that you will be able send at least 1 person to this course. The official TLAER textbook will also be available at registration for a discount at only $105 (discounted rate available up to 30 days prior to the training date, $120 after that date as it will need to be mailed to you). This book can be added to your organization's library and shared with others who could utilize the information.
