

Lancaster Tower 2015 Facility of the Year

During the third week in September, Lancaster Air Traffic Control Manager, Amy S t. Pierre, attended the Midwest ATC Services, Inc. Manager's Conference in Kansas City, Missouri. This event provides an opportunity for Midwest ATC Services managers, and those who work at the corporate level, to interact with one another. Amy enjoyed the presentation made by Kim Curry, the FAA Contract Tower (FCT) Program Manager for the FAA. She discussed issues FCTs face, and the changing dynamics within the FAA. She was a great speaker, who was entertaining while providing a lot of great information.

The most rewarding part of the week just so happened to be on Amy's birthday, Wednesday, September 21st. At the conference dinner, the Lancaster Tower was recognized as Midwest's 2015 Eastern Region Facility of the Year. This recognition came in part because of the great letters of support the Lancaster Tower received from LNS tenants and other users. "I was very excited to bring this award back to my controllers as it is well deserved," Amy said. In addition to the Tower's award, ATC controller, Shawn Hammond, was recognized as Midwest's 2015 Eastern Region Controller of the Year. "His performance on the job is exemplary, and the entire LNS ATC team was so happy for the corporate office recognition," Amy added.

Thanks to those who support Lancaster air traffic control every day as they strive to offer the best air traffic control services they can. Lancaster Tower controllers and those who fly within their area of service are an important team working together to achieve success.
