Keynote- 10:05 - 10:35 am

Brittany Maas, MSW, LCSW

Caregiving can change relationships in unexpected ways as new responsibilities and shifting roles become part of daily life. These changes often bring feelings of grief, especially when a loved one is still present but has changed in meaningful ways—a type of grief known as ambiguous loss. Join our supportive caregiving program to better understand these emotions, connect with others who share similar experiences, and learn practical strategies for coping, building resilience, and caring for yourself while caring for your loved one.
