Featuring Dr. Alexis M. LaPietra, medical director of the ALTO® Program, St. Joseph's Health & Dr. Mark Rosenberg, MBA, chairman, Department of Emergency Medicine, St. Joseph's Health

The United States is in the midst of an opioid overdose crisis that continues to claim the lives of tens of thousands of Americans each year. There is mounting interest in the use of non-opioid analgesics in the management of acute pain in an effort to decrease the harms associated with unnecessary opioid prescribing in the acute care setting. Increasing evidence supports the use of a multimodal approach in the management of acute pain secondary to renal colic, headache/migraine, musculoskeletal sprain and strain, and radiculopathy.

The Alternatives to Opioids (ALTO®) Nevada Pain Management Seminar will serve as an introductory course highlighting the state of the opioid crisis, the evidence to support the use of non-opioid medications and modalities, and the future of pain management and addiction medicine in the acute care setting.
