

MIDDLE SCHOOL MATTERS

PSALM 145: 14

“The Lord upholds
all who fall
and lifts up all who are bowed down.”

A NOTE FROM DIXON'S DESK

Mistakes are a normal and natural part of being human. How we react to others' mistakes and how we learn from our own mistakes are fundamental to who we become as people. In Middle School, mistakes can feel more catastrophic than they actually are, especially when they happen in front of peers or when it seems like everyone knows about them. Our students need a lot of reminders to give grace to others and extend grace to themselves.

As Christians, we have the beautiful reminder that our mistakes do not define us. Our identity is not found in being perfect, getting everything right, or meeting every expectation. Our identity is found in Christ, who meets us with grace, forgiveness, and mercy. A mistake can be an opportunity to practice humility, take responsibility, seek forgiveness, make things right, and grow in wisdom. We also want them to understand that when they fail, they do not have to be crushed by shame. Our prayer is that our students would respond to their mistakes, and the mistakes of others, in a way that reflects the grace we have received from Christ.

Character Corner

Kindness

As we continue our initiative in the high school and middle school to build a culture of Godly character, we have turned our focus from the character trait of respect to the trait of kindness, which is God's love put into action. A thorough definition of kindness is "active, compassionate goodness toward others that reflects God's own kindness to us; it is more than niceness--it is Spirit-produced benevolence." I challenged all of our secondary students in their Bible classes to demonstrate kindness on a daily basis, following the example of Jesus, and our faculty is on the lookout to catch them being kind. We invite you to reinforce this challenge at home so that together we can reap a harvest of kindness throughout our PCA family.

September - Goal Setting with your Student

by Mr. Jones, PCA Spiritual Formation
Director

The beginning of the school year is one of excitement and hope. As our teachers plan through their curriculum each summer, they set goals for their students. There are benchmarks they want to hit by the end of the quarter, semester, and year. The goal of that class is to teach the student the material and prepare them for the next level of their education and life.

One of the things we can do as parents is to think through yearly goals for our children. Ask yourselves these questions: Where would I like them to be spiritually by the end of the semester?

What life skill would I like for them to master by the end of the quarter?

Pray about your answers, seeking wisdom and discernment alongside your spouse or trusted family members. Pick just one or two goals to write down, then look for natural ways to model and talk about them with your teen throughout the year.
