

Molly Livingstone is an international speaker, comedian, and storyteller who uses humor as a powerful tool to overshare, bringing laughter, honesty, and a new perspective on life in Israel. Raised in Los Angeles Jew-ISH, she fell passionately in love with the country on her Birthright trip, and moved to Israel, without Hebrew or a plan. Turning her challenges into shared laughter, Molly founded Israel's English-speaking improv comedy troupe, Hahafuch.

Molly Livingstone is the founder of The Jewish Comedy Center, a new project designed to be a central hub for Jewish comedy around the globe. She performs, consults, and facilitates workshops around the world. Blending sharp comedic timing with profound cultural insights, she connects audiences worldwide through the humanity of humor, healing with laughter, and how we can all join in on the joke. She proves that even in the most challenging times, humor is not just entertainment, it is our greatest tool for coping, surviving, and dare she say it, thriving, despite it all.

About The Jewish Comedy Center:

We are building the world's first and ONLY global hub dedicated to Jewish humor. This is your destination, where comedy becomes education, cultural diplomacy, healing trauma, building community, relationships and humanity.

Our vision combines live entertainment, immersive experiences, education, and digital media to inspire Jewish pride while creating one of Israel's most unique cultural attractions. From a deep dive of Jewish Humor's history to present day comedy, and how laughs can build a stronger, more connected Jewish Peoplehood around the world.

Because laughter isn't an escape from reality. It's one of the ways we find the strength to face it.
