

Career Spotlight: Taylor Forquer, Financial Analyst

Behind every informed financial decision is a team dedicated to making sense of the numbers. As a financial analyst for the Fairfield County Commissioners, Taylor Forquer plays an important role in helping county departments understand financial data and make confident, informed decisions.

Her responsibilities include budgeting, forecasting, analyzing financial reports and explaining changes in financial results. By breaking down complex information into clear, useful insights, Forquer helps departments better understand their finances and plan for the future.

For Forquer, the most rewarding part of her job is solving problems and making complicated information easier to understand. She enjoys finding new ways to approach challenges and appreciates that her role provides continuous opportunities to learn.

"I genuinely like taking something that looks complicated and breaking it down, so it actually makes sense," Forquer said. "It's rewarding when someone says, 'Oh, that helps a lot,' or 'I didn't think of it that way.'"

For those interested in pursuing a similar career, Forquer recommends building a strong foundation in financial principles and Excel while developing effective communication skills. She encourages aspiring financial analysts to gain experience through entry-level finance or accounting positions, stay curious, and never be afraid to ask questions.
