V-DAY 2020: CALL FOR VOLUNTEERS

We are excited to announce a collaboration between UC Davis School of Medicine and School of Nursing that will lead to a production and fundraising event, The Vagina Monologues. This epic play written by Eve Ensler has been performed all over the world every year around February 14th to raise awareness about violence against women and girls. This event will take place at the Betty Irene Moore School of Nursing (date TBD, February or first week of March 2020). Some roles from the script haven't been assigned yet. An inclusive production is very important to us. To accomplish this, we respectfully ask that you outreach to your trans women friends, family and colleagues and encourage their participation to make this performance even more meaningful. Proceeds will go to a local community organization that helps empower women survivors of abuse and violence.

If you would like to have a non-acting role, that is also great because we need a lot of assistance and various talents. Some roles would require a regular commitment (rehearsals for actors twice a week in January until the show), some others (like ushers, ticketing the night of the event) would require less time. We would be grateful for any time and creativity you have to share for this meaningful event.

If you or someone you know who might be interested in volunteering, please reach out to Caroline Giroux, cgiroux@ucdavis.edu or Colleen Sweeney, casweeney@ucdavis.edu

Thank you for considering!
