VAYISHLECH Finally free from serving his father-in-law, Laban, Jacob is informed that Esau and 400 men are on the way to visit him. Jacob springs into action in three ways: He separates his traveling party into two groups, prays to God for safety and prepares gifts for his brother. Jacob, now standing alone, is met by a mysterious being, and the two wrestle until daybreak. Jacob proves to be stronger and demands a blessing, and the unknown being changes Jacob's name to Israel, because he had "striven with beings divine and human, and prevailed." Esau arrives with open arms, kissing Jacob and speaking of journeying together. Jacob, however, insists that Esau accept his gifts and asks to travel at a slow pace behind Esau's company. Jacob and Esau reunite only once more: to bury their father, Isaac. Jacob's daughter, Dinah, is raped by Shechem, the son of the Hivite chief, Hamor. Shechem wants to marry Dinah, and Hamor asks Jacob to promote marriage between the Israelites and the Hivites. Jacob's sons approve, provided that Hivite males are circumcised. Simeon and Levi slaughter the Hivites recovering from their circumcisions, and the brothers pillage their camp. God tells Jacob to return to Bethel, where he is blessed once more, reminding him of the covenant promising his offspring the land of Canaan. Rachel gives birth to her second son, Benjamin, but dies immediately afterward.
