

PROFILE

Dr. Dzubur was born in Bosnia and Herzegovina and spent his first seven years there. He was raised in the city of Chicago from the age of eight. After being inspired by his “father’s stories about his ‘eye-doctor’ friend and how complex this small organ was,” Dr. Dzubur decided to study Optometry. He attended and graduated from The University of Illinois and The Rosenberg School of Optometry. He opted to remain in the Chicago area because of his family and loves “teaching the next generation of OD’s and cultivating those relationships as a mentor.”

WHAT HE LOVES MOST ABOUT HIS JOB

“I don’t have a job, I have a hobby that I love to do and get paid to do so.”

UNUSUAL OR SURPRISING DIAGNOSIS

“A 21-year-old patient was referred to me for Dry Eye in her left eye mostly. After an exam and a conversation with the patient, her symptoms did not match what I was accustomed to uncovering. Sent the patient for an MRI and she was diagnosed with MS the following week.”

ADVICE FOR NEW OPTOMETRISTS

“Know your value and stick to it during those first job interviews.”

HOBBIES

I “teach my kids about soccer, baseball, gymnastics, and life. I like playing poker in my spare time with my friends.”
