

Hiding Behind the Title

Discovering Your Intrinsic Identity

THIS SUMMER ... Discover and examine your intrinsic identity and self-leadership in order to enhance your organizational leadership.

Grounded in research-based neuroscience as well as reflection on formative years and emotional intelligence, this workshop will enable educational leaders to better understand their intrinsic self. This discovery will allow leaders to identify how they have led themselves and consequently their school organization.

Dr. Alicia Huddleston, an educational consultant and adjunct professor at DePaul University, will guide participants in analyzing their life experiences and self knowledge and how it has influenced them as self-leaders in the areas of emotional intelligence, ethical decision making, and therefore leaders in their school community. This workshop will also offer methods to enhance personal and social emotional intelligence and ethical competencies.

Thursday,
Sept. 29

8:30 am–3:30 pm

In-person Training

Center for Professional Learning
503 N. County Farm Rd,
Wheaton, IL 60187

REGISTER

Audience: Superintendents, assistant superintendents, principals, assistant principals, and other individuals who are in school or district leadership roles. Both veteran and novice leaders will benefit from this workshop.

This workshop is sponsored by the SEL Hub grant, so there is only a $10 per person fee to cover the cost of lunch. Deadline to register is July 15. Due to the interactive nature of the course, registration is limited to 45 individuals.