This two-day workshop, led by Melissa Hinshaw, provides school administrators and Gifted/Talented leaders information and tools to provide support and feedback to GT programs and practitioners. The June 12th session will be held at 421 N. County Farm Rd in Wheaton.

Topics include:

- GT pedagogy
- Best practices in identification and instruction
- Evaluating effectiveness of programs
- Tools for observing practices that align with evaluation protocols

Melissa Hinshaw is the Assessment Director at Northwestern University's Center for Talent Development. Throughout her career, she has cultivated expertise in school-based assessment systems and data analysis/applications. She oversees assessment-related work at the center, curates and delivers talent development graduate learning, provides custom professional learning solutions and program review, and serves as a consultant and advocate. She presents at national and regional conferences on topics related to gifted education; talent development; and best assessment practices.
