

Mrs. Kiley's Round Up

Dear FAWE Families,

With the start of second semester, I would like to take this month to revisit the importance of our focus on Social Emotional Learning (SEL) both as a staff and as a school community. Cultivating Compassion for ourselves and others can help us to handle interpersonal challenges we all face on a daily basis. We continue to help our students to recognize how important it is to take care of themselves both physically and mentally to lead a healthy lifestyle. When I visited classrooms on our first day back from Winter Break, it was heartwarming to see each of our classrooms holding their morning class meeting to revisit their class community and welcome each of their classmates back to school. During the January Early Release Professional Development time, we as a FAWE Staff took time to connect with one another using an SEL activity, as it is important to practice ourselves what we are implementing with our students. The activity was a wonderful reminder that we should take time to truly LISTEN to help Cultivate Compassion for others. I encourage you to possibly incorporate this activity with your family! Thank you for supporting us in our endeavor to meet the needs of the whole child.
