

NASTF to Expand Heavy Duty Capabilities

For almost twenty years, NASTF has served as a cooperative effort among the automotive service industry, the equipment and tool industry and automotive manufacturers. In keeping with that spirit of cooperation, NASTF is requesting industry participation as it develops its heavy duty capabilities.

As NASTF prepares to release a full website overhaul in 2020, the NASTF Heavy Duty Team is seeking volunteers from the heavy duty OEM world to assist NASTF in ensuring that our service information links are up to date. Accuracy and clarity are of particular importance for independent heavy duty repairers as, in addition to the challenge of servicing various makes, models and years, heavy duty trucks can consist of components from several different manufacturers.

If you are interested in assisting NASTF with developing and maintaining its heavy duty resources, please contact Holly Wolfe at hwolfe@nastf.org.

The National Automotive Service Task Force is a not-for-profit organization established to facilitate the identification and correction of gaps in the availability and accessibility of automotive service information, service training, diagnostic tools and equipment, and communications for the benefit of independent automotive service professionals.