Grocery Bags

Unless you live in a state or city that has placed fees on them, plastic grocery bags don't directly cost you money — but their environmental cost is enormous, from animals ingesting them to the pollution and greenhouse gases created during their manufacturing.

The average American uses a whopping 365 plastic bags per year, but considering that in Denmark that number is just four, it should be pretty easy to make the switch to reusable totes. To streamline the process, we recommend keeping a few foldable bags in your car or purse at all
