Children's Mental Health Matters!

What You Can Do To Spread Awareness

Social Media!

Share messages on social media about why children's mental health is important all throughout the month of May, but particularly during Children's Mental Health Acceptance Week, May 1st – 7th.

- Take a picture showcasing something relating to CMHAW and grab people's attention! It can be anything from your own family photo to an informational post that has a list of resources advocating for awareness.
- #cmhaw2022, #cccmhc & #breakthestigmanv
- Tag legislators in social media posts. This notifies legislators of posts so they will be more likely to look at them. Use #nvleg

Samples messages provided below.

Go Green on May 5th!

Invite staff, parents, friends, and everyone to show their support by taking and sharing selfies wearing green and if they want, hold and write a statement about why children's mental health matters. Post these pictures on social media with the hashtag #cmhaw2022, #cccmhc, & #breakthestigmanv.

Reach Out Individually!

Think about who you interact with on a daily basis, whether it be friends, family, or neighbors, that you think would find this information useful for themselves or others and start a conversation with them. It's never too late to start advocating for children's mental health.

Share Information Locally!

Ask wellness-oriented businesses like your local children's gym or health food store to put informational pamphlets to spread awareness. Along with that, reach out to your personal and professional contacts to encourage them to be an advocate for children's mental health and spread awareness through their connections. Doctors' offices, schools, churches, youth groups, and other organizations associated with children would be a great start. Your efforts would be a tremendous help to the community.

Get Your Employer Involved!

Let them know that May 1st-7th is CMHAW and share why mental health should be a topic of discussion. Suggest they share information in company-wide communications and put up informational posters in break rooms or common spaces.

Discuss Children's Mental Health Acceptance At Your Meetings!

Share announcements about CMHAW, put information in a newsletter or announcement that goes out to your partners' and or clients, choose subjects/content by visiting our website for shareable information and resources about awareness.

Add CMHAW Background to Social Media or Virtual Meetings!

To raise awareness, add a background for an online class/meetings or on your social media profile. The virtual background feature allows you to display an image or video as your background during online meetings to promote awareness. Samples and instructions provided beginning page 6.

Use Your Voice!

Share the tips and resources you learned from CMHAW with work colleagues or family friends and/or record brief informational segments that include important information on mental health awareness which can include facts, information regarding organizations and resources, and issues that are relevant to your community.

Share Your Story!

Share why children's mental health matters to you and share! Your story matters and people want to hear it! Post on social media, write something for listservs you are a part of, blogs, newsletters, or contact your local TV station or radio show and share your mental health journey. The more people are comfortable discussing this issue, the less stigma there will be.

Contact Your Elected Official!

Be an advocate! Get in touch with an elected official and let them know why you think children's mental health should be a priority.

- Reach out to your senator: <https://www.senate.gov/senators/senators-contact.htm>
- Reach out to your representative: https://ziplook.house.gov/htbin/findrep_house?ZIP=

Ideas for CMHA Events:

Adapt these ideas or come up with your own to engage your community in fostering acceptance of children who experience mental health challenges.

- Book Clubs – Select books that help youth/adults have open discussions about their feelings and mental health
- Movie Night – View a movie that focuses on mental health and facilitate a discussion afterward with your audience
- Pledge Drive – Host a social media drive encouraging community members to sign pledges to fight mental health prejudice and discrimination at Nami.org/stigmafree and stampoutstigma.com
- Walk or Run – Organize a walk or run for community members to come together to support CMHA
- Art and Writing Contests – Give youth the opportunity to share their creativity and their feelings about mental health
- Talent Show – Give youth the opportunity to share their creativity and their feelings about mental health
- Service Projects – Organize a service project that gives your staff or community the opportunity to support youth who have mental health challenges
- Educate – Bring in a speaker to share information or a personal story about mental health recovery or resilience
- Create Your Own – Children's Mental Health Awareness activity. Include CMHA in something you already do!

Social Media Posts & Online Outreach

Helpful Social Media Tips:

- What should I promote on social media?
 - You can promote anything you put online on social media. If you have a Children's Mental Health Awareness event, Twitter chat, or a graphic you developed, promoting it on social media is a great way to reach your audience.
 - Here are some examples of things you can promote on social media:
 - Facebook events
 - Twitter chats
 - Live events
 - Studies and research
 - Social media campaigns (online marketing campaigns in which businesses leverage social media to increase brand awareness and build client relationships.)
 - Graphics
- What platforms should I use?
 - You should decide where to promote your materials based on which platforms your audiences are on. If you want to reach middle-aged females, for example, Facebook is your best bet. If you want to reach youth and teens, Snapchat may be the best option. Know where your audience is and meet them there. Dedicate some time to researching where your intended audiences are engaging. However, you should have a realistic idea of how much capacity your team has to maintain that presence. Social media platforms require a considerable amount of time to maintain, so be sure you've mastered one before moving onto the next.
- Best practices for all social media platforms:
 - Include a "Call to Action" (Tell your readers what they can do.)
 - This may be for example, registering for an Awareness event or just clicking a "Like" button. Whatever your post is, there should be a suggested action for the user to keep them engaged with your content.
 - Include a link when appropriate.
 - Don't just reference an event, etc.—include a link to the web page that contains detailed information. Since social media is geared toward short-form content, give your users a brief snapshot of what it is you're showing them and then direct them to where the information is kept.
 - Include an image
 - Social media posts with visuals get 180 percent greater engagement. Tweets with images receive 150 percent more retweets. Images make up 93 percent of the most engaging posts on Facebook.
- There are many free resources (with free tutorials) that will help you create images without investing a lot of time.
 - Such as Canva or PicMonkey
- Include relevant hashtags and handles.
 - One of the strengths of using social media to promote your content is that you can leverage relevant audiences to send out your message to a wider group of people. Make sure that when you promote specific campaigns or reference a user, you mention the individual or organization in the post. As events and campaigns often have specific hashtags associated with them, make sure you add those hashtags when applicable; the organizations running those campaigns will be looking for content.

Example Facebook/Twitter/Instagram/etc. posts:

- Anyone can experience mental health challenges, and anyone can get better, too. Being there for friends can make all the difference. You can help break down stigma by learning and sharing the truth about mental health. Visit the Clark County Children's Mental Health Consortium website to learn more: www.cccmhc.org.
- Labels can hurt – they're often based on stereotypes, not on fact. Learning all you can about mental health is an important first step. Learn more about how to have conversations about mental health and eliminate the stigma by visiting the Clark County Children's Mental Health Consortium website: www.cccmhc.org.
- See the person, not the condition: 1 in 5 Americans live with a mental health condition, and they all have their own story, path, and journey that says more about them than their diagnoses. Get tips for how to talk with your kid about mental health and help eliminate stigma from the Clark County Children's Mental Health Consortium. Visit: www.cccmhc.org.
- Navigating life with a mental health condition can be tough, and the isolation, blame, and secrecy that is often encouraged by stigma can create huge challenges to moving forward in one's recovery journey. Learn more about how to eliminate stigma from the Clark County Children's Mental Health Consortium: www.cccmhc.org.
- The Clark County Children's Mental Health Consortium is committed to tackling the mental health stigma and is teaming up with other Southern Nevada organizations to change the conversation. Understanding mental health is more than being able to identify symptoms and naming conditions. It's essential to dispel misinformation and public misconceptions. To learn more about our efforts and get involved, please visit www.cccmhc.org.
- All youth have the right to happy and healthy lives and deserve access to effective mental health care for prevention and treatment. Learn what to look for and how to have conversations about mental health. Visit the Clark County Children's Mental Health Consortium website to get resources and information on children's mental health: www.cccmhc.org. #cccmhc #breakthestigmanv
- Children living with mental health challenges need everyone's help to make sure they have access to the care they need. As a professional, you can help all Clark County youth get and keep access to quality mental health care services through awareness and advocacy. Help change the conversation by joining the Clark County Children's Mental Health Consortium. Visit www.cccmhc.org for opportunities and resources to help improve children's mental health. #cccmhc #breakthestigmanv
- Addressing the mental health needs of children is the responsibility of all community members. Children and youth learn from their parents, caregivers, family members, teachers, doctors - the adults they are taught to respect and rely on. In these roles, we impact how children and youth think about and care for their own mental health and how they treat others who have mental health challenges. We have our work cut out for us. Now is the time to shape a brighter, healthier future for the next generation. To learn more about our efforts and get involved, please visit www.cccmhc.org. #cccmhc #breakthestigmanv
- It's okay to talk about mental health. Tough times happen, but reaching out to others can help you get through them. The Clark County Children's Mental Health Consortium advocates for the mental health needs of all Clark County youth. Visit us at www.cccmhc.org. #cccmhc #breakthestigmanv

4 Ways You Can Stop Mental Health Myths & Misperceptions

Stop using mental health disorders as adjectives.

Using mental health disorders in place of adjectives diminishes the seriousness of mental illnesses, further contributing to bias and prejudice and spreading misinformation as to what it really means to be mentally ill. Examples: Referring to a meticulous person as OCD or the changing weather as Bipolar.

What You Can Do:

Educate yourself and others so we do not use diagnoses as buzzwords.

NATIONAL FEDERATION OF FAMILIES
Bringing Lived Experience to Family Support

Stop using phrases like, "Just snap out of it!"

Not only does this delegitimize someone's mental illness, it also places the blame on the person by making it seem like a choice. Asking someone to "snap" or "snap out of it" is like asking someone with, say, a broken arm, to stop feeling pain by thinking positively. Physical health doesn't work that way and neither does mental health.

What You Can Do:

Ask how someone is feeling and listen. Sometimes, just knowing that someone else is listening can make all the difference in the world.

Stop treating psychiatric medication differently than medication prescribed for a physical illness.

Medication is often viewed as a crutch, or something only "crazy" people need. We invalidate those with mental health challenges with beliefs like this. If it were possible to just "pull ourselves out of it," suicide wouldn't be the 2nd most common cause of death for youth ages 15 to 24.

What You Can Do:

Help others understand that medication to improve mental health is no different than medication needed for a physical condition.

Stop leaving mental health out of the conversation.

We aren't taught language to discuss mental health the way we are for physical health.

What You Can Do:

If you are someone who struggles with a mental health challenge, share your experience. If not, don't be afraid to educate yourself and ask questions. Approach the topic with sensitivity and without judgment. Also, talk with children and youth about their feelings. Make mental health part of the conversation in your home.

www.ffcmh.org

TALK

Talk with your children about their mental health. Make topics around mental health, stress, anxiety, fear and feelings common in your home and in your child's life.

#weALLhavementalhealth

TRUST

Trust your gut; you know your child best! If you believe your child is struggling or needs help, trust that feeling.

#NoHealthWithoutMentalHealth

ROLE MODEL

Show your children it is ok to talk about and care for their mental health by taking care of yourself.

MENTAL HEALTH FOR CHILDREN

What Parents Can Do

NATIONAL FEDERATION OF FAMILIES FOR CHILDREN'S MENTAL HEALTH, FFCMH.ORG • THE YOUTH MENTAL HEALTH PROJECT, YMHPROJECT.ORG

ASK FOR HELP

Get a referral to a mental health specialist, if needed. Provide your child with every opportunity to receive treatment and support – just as you would for a broken arm or a fever.

CONNECT

You are not alone; 1 in 5 children experiences a mental health condition. Connect with other families who can offer support, help and resources.

TEAM UP

Build a team with the professionals and child-serving systems involved in your child's life. An open and honest dialogue with teachers, coaches, doctors and others will give them the information they need to support your child.

Mental Health Acceptance

Because awareness ISN'T ENOUGH.

In 2022, the National Children's Mental Health Week campaign was redefined to emphasize the need to move beyond awareness.

Acceptance means recognizing that our mental health is as important as all other health issues.

It means acknowledging that we all have mental health needs that require care, just like brushing our teeth.

It means responding to mental health conditions with treatment and support like any other disease.

Acceptance would mean my child feels safe to say she is going to see her therapist, just as freely as she says she is going to the doctor or dentist, finding value.

It means a more empathetic approach towards children who struggle with mental health issues and recognizing it's not something they can turn on and off.

Acceptance means understanding that a mental health diagnosis is not the end – that coping skills and support are available.

It means understanding when someone has an emotional disability and is symptomatic, they need support, not punishment.

Acceptance means my child isn't embarrassed or afraid to ask for help.

It means children with mental health challenges are accepted, supported, and feel wanted and worthy.

It means being held in the caring hands of everyone in the community.

It means being treated with the same dignity and respect as others.

It means being brought into the fold – into the group. It feels like protection.

It means my kids are happier and feel understood.

Acceptance means I am loved and cared for as I am.

It means having patience and making the effort to try to understand what someone is going through.

Acceptance means having the right to be unique – to express your feelings, thoughts, and opinions without judgment.

It means feeling free to discuss your challenges without feeling like others are judging or discrediting your experiences.

It means seeing people first – acknowledging their strengths, not just their challenges or diagnosis.

We asked children, youth and families – "What does acceptance of mental health challenges mean to you?"

Acceptance means educators and community members would understand my child's behavior, and that is a reflection of trauma that she experienced – not her personality or our parenting skills.

Acceptance means respecting that I am the expert on my child and trusting that I know what's best for him/her.

Acceptance means the world!

Children's Mental Health Acceptance Week

The meaning and importance of the shift from Awareness to Acceptance

Why? Awareness is passive. Acceptance inspires action! (asking for help, seeking treatment, offering support)

- Awareness means you know it exists
- Acceptance means you make a personal connection and take steps to learn more

- Awareness means you acknowledge the issue
- Acceptance means you work to understand and offer compassion and sensitivity to others

- Awareness means you share concern
- Acceptance means you offer help and support without judgment

- Awareness means you are informed about the issue
- Acceptance means you embrace it and are invested and committed to inspiring and building support in your own community

Awareness Is Not Enough!

It's Time to Step into Action.

- Acceptance is the next step towards building an inclusive, supportive society that celebrates all children and youth
- Acceptance moves us to advocate for equitable support and family-driven treatment options
- Acceptance supports social justice for children who experience mental health challenges – and their families

Show others that children's mental health matters. Take action during Children's Mental Health Acceptance Week – and every day of the year!

NATIONAL FEDERATION OF FAMILIES
Bringing Lived Experience to Family Support

For Youth Who Experience Mental Health and/or Substance Use Challenges

We asked parents and caregivers, "What access and opportunities would your child gain if their mental health challenges were supported and ACCEPTED in your community?" Here's what they said.

Supportive Community

- Easier to make friends
- Access to a school psychologist or counselor
- Relationships/connections with supportive adults & peers
- A meaningful role in the community

“Support and resources would be devoted to ensuring my child can be as successful as any other child in the community.”

Appropriate Education

- Inclusion rather than isolation
- Well-established accommodations for I.E.P.s & 504 plans
- Participation in prosocial sports, clubs & school activities
- Support, rather than discipline, for difficult behaviors

“With appropriate support, youth could achieve a higher level of education, leading to expanded employment choices, financial growth, independence and stability for their future.”

Improved Treatment

- More likely to seek help; less reluctant to ask
- Having skilled providers in every community
- Families/youth would guide treatment planning
- Effective treatment is available - when it's needed

“Access to skilled providers and referral services would be a relief. Coordinated efforts between schools, families and support agencies is imperative.”

Increased Funding

- For research on mental health challenges
- For schools, camps and other programming
- Equitable insurance reimbursement for treatment
- To support families balancing work and care needs

“Our children need resources, support, and the chance to learn, grow, and - most of all - thrive as they are. We need equity!”

The Heart of Acceptance

NATIONAL FEDERATION OF FAMILIES
Bringing Lived Experience to Family Support

What Acceptance of Mental Health Needs Means for Youth and Young Adults

Getting to the heart of the matter, young people shared how acceptance would change the way they think and feel about themselves.

They said:

- I would feel more confident
- I would believe in myself
- I would love and accept myself
- I would be true to myself
- I would be able to find my value
- I would not feel like a bad kid
- I would feel wanted
- I would feel accepted, supported, and worthy
- I would feel welcomed and supported
- I would feel happier and understood
- I would feel I am loved and cared for as I am
- I would not feel shameful
- I would feel empowered
- I would feel the right to be unique
- I would have the ability to live and thrive
- I would smile again
- I would feel free to share my feelings
- I would feel important and valued
- I would have a stronger, more positive sense of self
- I would feel like I have a place in my community
- I would better understand myself and the world I live in
- I would have a happier, healthier lifestyle
- I would be more willing to share
- I would feel better about myself
- I would feel self-love
- I would feel more positive
- I would feel good about myself
- I would learn, grow and thrive
- I would have a healthier mind set
- I would have a healthier self-image
- I would feel successful
- I would be more comfortable being a part of my community
- I would feel encouraged and empowered
- I would feel successful in my goals
- I would have some fun along the way
- I would feel I can achieve independence and stability
- I would have self-acceptance
- I would strive to contribute to my community
- I would have self-esteem
- I would have normalcy
- I would have a successful, normal, and cultivated life
- I would be able to enjoy things other children enjoy
- I would be confident and wouldn't isolate myself

"I would feel like the sky's the limit!"
