(Ian McIver is on hiatus).

Jan./Feb. Film Class: God goes to the movies.

In this six-part series we will explore the depiction of religious themes in the movies. Often hilarious, sometimes deep, always entertaining!

Jan. 24: Ingmar Bergman's Winter Light (1963)

An uncompromising masterpiece about a disillusioned priest coping with his loss of faith because of God's "terrible silence."

Jan. 31: Monty Python's The Life of Brian (1979)

Brian Cohen (Graham Chapman) is an average young Jewish man, but through a series of ridiculous events, he gains a reputation as the Messiah.

Feb. 7: Black Narcissis (1947) Powell & Pressburger-

Black Narcissus is a provocative, dazzling and rich-colored psychological-religious and sexual drama from the legendary partnership duo: British director Michael Powell and scriptwriter Emeric Pressburger.

Feb. 14: "Oh, God!" (1977)

Carl Reiner's Oh, God! is a treasure of a movie: A sly, civilized, quietly funny speculation on what might happen if God endeavored to present himself in the flesh yet once again to forgetful Man.

Feb. 21: Bruce Almighty (2003)

When Bruce Nolan's (Jim Carrey) is passed over for a coveted position, he loses it, complaining that God is treating him poorly. Soon after, God (Morgan Freeman) actually contacts Bruce and offers him all of his powers if he thinks he can do a better job.
