MARISSA GEE

IKAR - Jewish community in Los Angeles

The Black community in the United States isn't a monolith. The same is true for the Jewish community. Both communities are rich in diversity, and a part of that diversity is that within the Black community there are people who are Jewish, and within the Jewish community there are people who are Black. Join us for this important conversation about both Black diversity and Jewish diversity, and the many ways in which these two communities, both so rich in history, intersect with one another.
